Hey! Was it your cell phone? How about the iPod? For some people it was their best friend. Oh! Or perhaps it was Crazy Dipper Day at lunch. Could it have been so basic as a comfy bed? But how could some of us possibly live without a car? So, what was that one person, place, or thing that you used or experienced in your life that you couldn't possibly imagine living without?

So, was it your big moment on stage in the fall drama? Maybe it was the times you spent with your many BFFs at The Rally or The Cookout before each home game. How about the huge victory against Plum on their home field? Each of us will miss different moments, and that's why we are so divergent.

Dancin' and groovin'...

Keeping beat with the DJ, seniors Dessie Mitcheson, Dominique Pugliese, and Lindsey Nies cut a rug at the Homecoming Dance. Regarding the Luau theme, Pugliese said, "It was rockin' because everyone came to life on the dance floor." Pugliese and most of her friends chose to go to the dance dateless and spent the evening in "girls night out" fashion.

Simply Killer

Players persist through painful practices

Story by Cecilia Tregelles (12)

"Northmoreland practices? Oh, all you do is run up these huge hills and down the hills and then you run up them again. It's like death while being alive," said senior cross country runner Emily Rowley.

This account of one killer practice evoked vividly familiar images for most students, as a personally experienced killer practice leapt to mind. Almost all activities held practices that fit this description. The infamous marching band practices, for example, consisted of repetition on frigid nights, while football players frequently practiced in heavy, drenching rain, so that both sports added to the weight of the phrase. But did students really endure all this? According to freshman marching band member David Kramer, they did quite frequently.

"We were out there in any weather," he said.

It sounded rigid, but as the old adage declared, 'practice makes perfect,' even if deemed killer.

Football senior Corey Dwyer said, "Everyone had those practices that they just couldn't stand, but the best way to handle a killer practice was to approach it with a better attitude and work hard. After all, it was over before you knew it."

"Mrs. Hampshire...Passe, tondu, passe, switch feet; passe, tondu, passe switch feet."

Which coach inflicts the most painful tactics in conditioning?

Dead battery...

Just after running a section of the marching band's show, junior Katie Roberto lies in exhaustion on her battery prop. On performing in all weather conditions, Roberto said, "It was difficult in both cold and hot weather." She planned to continue performing in the band for all her years at the high school.

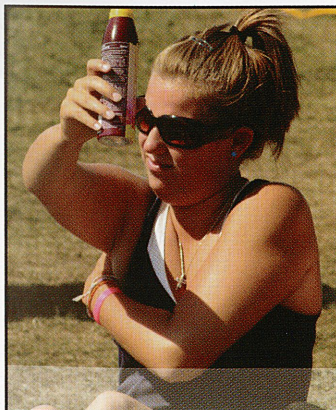

Weighting game...
Spotted by senior Corey Dwyer, junior Scottie Hawkins benches 315 to gain strength for football. "Coach Wilson pressured all of us to be the best that we could be, even if it almost killed us," said Hawkins. Besides lifting free weights, he squatted 435 pounds.

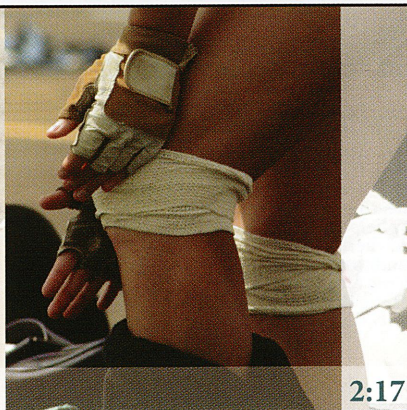

Everything's coming up rozes...
As she counts her steps between hurdles, sophomore Sarah Rozewicz snaps her trail leg to clear the next obstacle. "Although I never fell during a meet, I spent the majority of practice on my butt," said Rozewicz. She further said, "Coach Tutchstone's 'waterfall' sprints with hurdles were the worst."

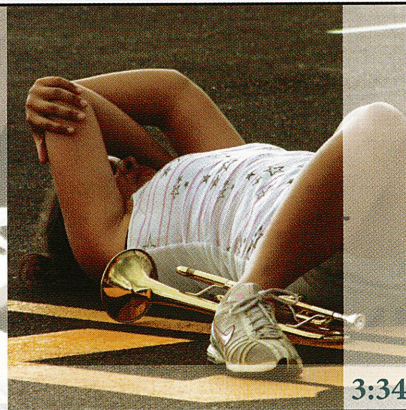

Warmin' up Whaley...
With a look of pain, freshman Taylor Whaley performs a v-up during cross country warm-ups. "The worst part about warm-ups is the 25 v-ups because they really strain your abs," said Whaley. Whaley enjoyed her first year of cross country because it gave her something to do after school in the fall.

Under the brassy glare of her tuba, junior Megan Arner warms up for the home competition. Jokingly, Arner also said, "I played the tuba better than the guys anyway."

To prepare for her lunch, junior Sarah Geffel heats her macaroni and cheese during her break from volunteering at the Vandergrift Food Bank. Geffel and many others donated their time to the food bank through the efforts of the Key Club sponsored by Mrs. Haney.

Learners personalize ways to reflect themselves

Between failed tests, failed classes and failed attempts to get a date to the big dance, having a venting mechanism represented one of the most important survival traits of a student's life. For some, this meant a friend to talk to, but for others, a little bit of self-expression did the trick. Many accomplished this the old-fashioned way, with a journal, but others found more unique ways to reflect themselves.

"For me, art was not just about making something beautiful; it was an act of therapy. Looking at what I had drawn, I could see myself and my mood at the time in all of my work," senior Kiersten Moyes said about the journalistic aspect of her art.

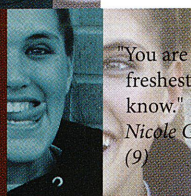

Likewise, junior Colin Martin felt the same way about music. "It was impossible to play the piano

Some found an outlet in more physical expression. "Dance really makes you put yourself out there. Often, you have to tell a story, and really become a character, but even if the dance does not have a story, it has a tone, and you have to really connect and sell it," said senior Courtney Polka.

On a muddy path to success, senior Chris Stankay strides during the opening minutes of the Slippery Rock Cross Country Invitational. "I was one of the lucky ones who didn't fall in the mud," said Stankay. He felt that his only obstacle to making the state meet involved his own will.

Road to greatness...
Marching in basic blocks, junior Abby Scanga warms up before the band practices their "Click" competition show. On the topic of a nationals year, Scanga said, "We had to be a lot more focused at practices. We had less water breaks and less talking time." She further said, "I truly hope that our efforts will pay off at nationals in Indianapolis."

The Long & Winding Road

Young motorists recollect state driving exam

"After failing my test for the first time at New Ken, I went to Indiana and got an instructor who reminded me vaguely of Mr. Sprenger," said junior Ben Doyle about his peculiar driver's test experience.

As anticipation mounted, new student drivers school wide embarked on the treacherous journey to their local Driver's Test centers in search of sweet freedom in the form of a driver's license. Even with the pressure to succeed weighing heavily on their shoulders, some students exemplified an uncanny level of confidence concerning their odds.

Stunningly calm and collected, junior Jon Chepkevich said, "No, I am not worried about my driver's test at all. Why should I? I am a parallel parking ninja."

With hopes of kissing their permits goodbye, some students returned from the test, heads hung in despair, while others enjoyed the self-satisfied privilege of a job well done.

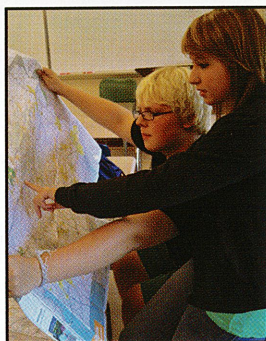

Junior Keisha Zuchelli said, "I passed my test the first time at New Ken."

Soak it up...
To make money for the volleyball team, freshman Ashleigh Fowkes scrubs an SUV at their car wash held across from the school. "The car wash was a lot of hard work, but it paid off with earning lots of money for the team," said Fowkes. Most of the funds raised helped to divert the costs of their annual banquet and gifts for players.

Railroad blues...
On the slippery tracks, senior Jaimi Hicks poses for her senior pictures. Hicks said, "It won't hit me that my senior year is over until I walk across the stage to get my diploma." Hicks employed alumni and former yearbook photographer Shauna Miller to shoot her senior pictures.

To complete a project in Mr. Fantaski's Math Analysis class, seniors Zac Steele and Breanna Bridge try to locate Mummastown on the Pennsylvania state map. Bridge said, "To earn bonus for the project, Jaimi Hicks, Chelsea Young, and I travelled to Timblin, PA, which was in the middle of nowhere." Bridge further said that a huge St. Bernard dog cornered them in front of the town sign.

Chosen escorts
share event pressure

Story by Rachel Zaydak (12)

They gave a steady arm for the girls as they clambered in their heels. They stood patiently, and braved the wave of camera flashes and boutonnières thrown their way. These men; Joe Chiodo, Dane Farrell, Derek Murdock, Zac Steele, Jordan Talmadge, and Ian Vergari, stood proud as the faithful 2008 Homecoming court escorts. Sure, these loyal escorts could not outshine the lovely ladies they accompanied, but their efforts were great nonetheless.

Certainly, not the Homecoming ladies dressed to impress.

"I spent $50 dollars on a new tie!" senior escort Derek Murdock exclaimed.

Sharply contrasting their polished dress shoes and suave suits, the actual men embodied a humble attitude, as illustrated by senior escort Jordan Talmadge, who said,

"Getting chosen as an escort made it look like a good-lookin' girl actually knew me."

As the energy of the big moment rose, a hush fell on the crowd, but the escorts, too, ran hopeful scenarios through their heads.

"If Mara won, I was planning to surprise her with a show choir lift," senior escort Joe Chiodo said.

After much suspense, senior escort Zac Steele celebrated with an emotional embrace as Grace Evans accepted the Homecoming Queen crown.

"I had my own reality show on MTV consisting of unreasonable 'challenges.'"

"Derek and I wanted the sweetest song ever, so we chose A Milli by Lil Wayne," said Moio. Collectively, the overzealous crowd cheered wildly after Moio's unique performance.

Father daughter moment...
With the crown of Homecoming royalty resting on her head, senior Grace Evans celebrates her victory with her father, Don Evans. "I was excited to win, but my dad was more excited that wearing a suit was worth the effort," said Evans. Of the four daughters in the Evans family, Grace became the first to earn a nomination on the Homecoming court.

Ferocious females...

Members of the court creatively display some pre-event antics. Concerning the evening, senior Jen Zatko said, "We all were honored to be chosen to the court. It really didn't matter who won because we all got along so well." The funny-face shot of the girls has become a Homecoming tradition.

Vandergrift invasion...

In a straight line of clean, glossy automobiles, the Homecoming Court proceeds to Davis Field during the Homecoming Parade. Boasting, senior Derek Murdock said, "Lisa Moio and I pulled up to the field in Kiski's nicest car." Murdock quickly volunteered his 1996 Mazda Miata when Moio asked him to escort her on to the field.

Young vote may sway presidential election

"To me, there's nothing more important in the world than voting. If you have the opportunity to vote, you should do it," said band director Mr. Heiny, and opportunity certainly knocked this year.

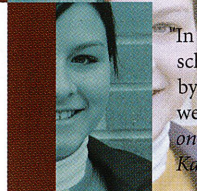

The 2008 presidential election evoked the interest of people across the nation. However, the unprecedented level of interest embodied by young voters truly stuck out. In years past, the young adults of America have earned a reputation for careless political apathy, but this apathy gradually led to the buildup of frustration that only those who have felt unheard can understand; and, finally, students made their voices heard in the revolution against stagnation and the popular perception of young voters.

Senior Jenessa McElfresh, said, "More young voters were registered this year than ever before. It seemed that everyone had a favorite candidate; and there were very few people

Balancing Math and Writing

Emphasis on PSSAs applies added pressures

Story by Susan Kessler (12)

The amount of stressed placed upon all students, but most of all juniors, doubled with the added emphasis placed on PSSA following the release of the previous year's test results.

When asked about preparations for the PSSA tests, junior Mike Klinger found the silver lining and said, "Despite, the stress, the 4-Sight test was definitely beneficial to one's academic career, and preparation for the PSSAs."

While all portions of the test carried an air of extreme gravity, the math portion stole the show from the very first week of school as juniors coped with the looming threat of remedial math tutoring in their senior year.

"I definitely don't want to spend my senior year's mornings in the library frolicking around on Study Island," said junior Allie Carter.

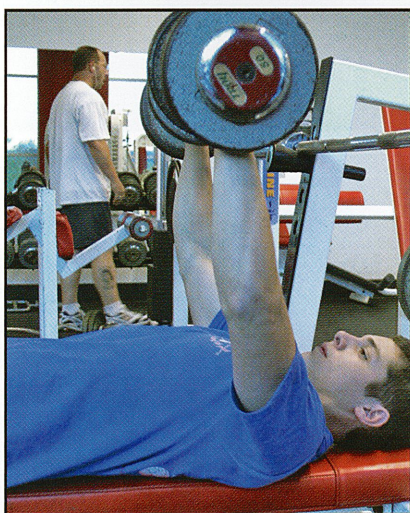

For other anxious test takers, however, the writing section represented more than enough stress to induce acute testophobia.

"The passages are really long for the amount of time that we have to read and write them," said junior Brandon Miller. "It's stressful because we didn't know that there would be so much emphasis placed on the tests," said junior Becky Beer.

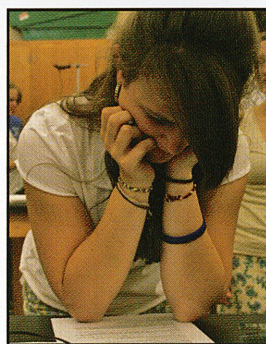

Tuba troubles...

In stretch block on the September 18th Thursday night practice, senior Josh Ferraro performs his activities with his sousaphone on the ground. "After four years of carrying one of the band's heaviest instruments, I've built up lots of endurance," said Ferraro. "The hardest part was always at the beginning of each marching season with so much time off."

Heavy load...

As he performs a dumbbell bench press, senior Zach Petro lifts to prepare for baseball season. "To be the best, pain is certain. Suffering is optional," said Petro with wisdom. Petro covered second base and shortstop and has played ball for over 13 years.

Cram session...

As quickly as possible, junior Megan Arner crams for a physics test. "To study, I usually just look over notes. Most of my teachers hand out study guides that prove to be very helpful," said Arner. Arner felt that she balanced her schoolwork and leisure time well throughout high school.

Annual event raises holiday
spirits, monies

Story by Ben Doyle (11)

For a week in December, members of the student body donated their time and effort to the Telethon. Held during the week of December 8, the Student Council members gathered outside K-Mart in the Hyde Park Plaza to raise money for charitable organizations.

"The Student Council divided the money raised in half evenly between Saint Vincent's DePaul, both the Apollo and Vandergrift branches, and the Salvation Army," said Mr. Smith, the Student Council sponsor.

"The generous donations helped less fortunate families provide presents for their families during the holiday season," said junior Student Council member Krista Schreiber.

The Student Council used a variety of methods, including a raffle of donated items, a class challenge, and old-fashioned donations. Reflecting the tireless efforts of the students, finances combined to raise just over twenty-one thousand dollars.

"The telethon presented the perfect opportunity to spend time with many great people, while also helping out the community," said junior Student Council member Anna Gongaware.

Game face on...
At the home game against Woodland Hills, senior Adrienne Vita paints junior Jessica Barker's face. "I was getting my game face on to hype up the team," said Barker. "Even though we lost, we still had school spirit." Before each game, Barker always attended the Cavalier Cookout with her older sister, Emily.

Alley Rally versus Cavalier Cookout

Amongst the exciting rush and hectic preparations before the big Friday night games, a new feeling arose this year. This feeling, one of competition, existed not between the two battling football teams, but between two otherwise homogeneous sects of Kiski fans. This year, the students had to choose between two brotherly pre-game activities, The Cookout and the Rally in the Alley.

The historic Rally in the Alley served to pump up Kiski football fans in the local streets of Vandergrift for years.

"The Rally is legendary," senior and Alley host, Zac Steele said.

However, a fever for the new pre-game function, The Cookout, during which students tailgated at the parking lot above the stadium, swept up many fans.

"I liked the people and the atmosphere of the cookout," junior Kayli Duppsstadt said.

Then, the civil competition experienced a weekly recess as the Kiski students hit the stands and kick-off signaled the beginning of a new game. All pre-game politics forgotten, students came together to cheer for their team, as the players raged into field competition.

"This rivalry was an 'all for fun rivalry.' Both activities surfaced for the same higher purposes," senior cohost of The Cookout, Ian Vergari said.

Chesty cheers...

At the Homecoming Pep Rally, senior Jared Atchison cheers on the crowd to pump them up for the game versus Highlands. On his emotional commitment, Atchison said, "It was the second best feeling ever." Atchison gave credit to his friend, Jaron Fitzgerald, for the paint job on his chest.

High cost of gasoline affects students' travels

"My parents pitch in for gas money when my driving has to do with school stuff," said senior Grace Evans concerning how inflation and constantly rising gas prices have affected her academic life.

Driving to extracurricular activities and sports became increasingly complicated for seniors when the price of gasoline reached nearly four dollars a gallon. Luckily, some parents and guardians chipped in to help pay for their son's or daughter's necessary travel expenses.

"My parents pay for my gas," said senior Dominique Pugliese.

Many other students faced the reality of choosing to not participate in an activity because they simply could not afford the cost. Aside from mandatory trips, students had to pass up opportunities to venture to the mall for the day or apply for a job farther from home because the cost of gas outweighed a steady paycheck.

"I don't go anywhere or do anything," said senior Sabrina Thompson.

At Kings Restaurant across from the high school, senior Amanda McDonald carefully removes a dish for Mrs. Flick, an English teacher at the school. Concerning her job at the establishment, McDonald said, "As a server, I actually make more than I can use. I try to put most of it away for college." McDonald served as a waitress at Kings for over two years.

At register four, senior Evan Gengo takes an order from a local patron at McDonald's. "Most of my money goes in the bank. I work so that I will be able to pay for college later," said Gengo. He has worked at McDonald's for over three years.

Tastes like chicken...
Careful to place only five, senior Zach Mikula prepares an order of chicken nuggets at Wendy's. "I try to put most of my money in the bank. It's really hard with the price of nearly everything in general," said Mikula. Usually, he worked between 18 and 22 hours per week.

Wickedly Wired

Cast, crew
dazzles crowd
from rafters

Story by Susan Kessler (12)

In putting on The Wizard of Oz, the musical cast and crew utilized state-of-the-art pyrotechnics and, more impressively still, spectacular flying effects. While, for the most part, the show went off without a hitch, misadventure stormed in on opening night.

It went down like this: I was the Mrs. Gulch/Wicked Witch look-alike. I flew across the stage on my bike and then the witch flew across on her broom. Eric Klingensmith was trying very hard to pull up all my weight to get me and the bike over the house, but when he was lowering me down he lost his grip and let go of the rope, so I fell to the ground. Then, Dane Farrell unhooked me and started hooking up the witch, but someone gave the signal to Eric to lift her before Dane was done. The wire flew up in the rafters," said senior Ashley Waner about the now infamous fiasco.

"It was terrible, and being dropped really hurt," Waner said.

The tirelessly gallant Mr. Capanna would not give up, though, and he did his best to fix the wire problems, but to no avail.

"Suddenly I saw Mr. Capanna launch up toward the ceiling in an attempt to get the wire. It was chaos, and he could not get it, so the flying effects had to be taken out until Act II," Waner said.

"I had to miss one of the few ski club trips."

With a mask of green, senior Kiersten Moyes puts on her most frightening witch face to terrorize the scarecrow. "To achieve the whole 'green effect' on my face, they caked so much make-up on that my skin was tinted for literally a week," said Moyes. Moyes enjoyed evoking fear in the cast and the audience while fulfilling her role as the Wicked Witch of the West.

As she flies in to Munchkinland, senior Bethany Plowman greets her adoring Munchkins. On flying, Plowman said, "It was scary at first, but once I was up there, I never wanted to come down." She further said, "That harness hurt really bad. No one will ever know how much work went into the flying effects."

Key Club members blanket community in kindness

Feverish hands of the Key Club worked in past years to make Project Linus a success, and the dedicated students set their sights just as high this year. Project Linus, aptly named for the beloved Peanuts character and his trusty security blanket, provided handmade blankets to give comfort to children in need.

"When my sister was in charge of it, it was very successful. She gathered at least 50 blankets," senior Emily Barker, who chaired the project, said.

Barker planned to keep it going, and others certainly joined in in her energetic enthusiasm.

"It was nice to see that people wanted to help those people who were less fortunate than themselves. They wanted to make the people feel loved," Barker said.

Senior Abby Pollick, who has made blankets for the project before, agreed.

Pollick said, "It was nice putting time into a project that brought people joy."

Eager participants carry confidence into auditions

Once again, the school facilitated many opportunities for the students. From sports to clubs to performance groups, those who desired to participate had plenty of avenues from which to choose. However, the downside to these plentiful opportunities involved the nerve-racking auditions that almost always went along with involvement.

When asked about her level of confidence in her auditioning skills, Senior Kiersten Moyes said, "As the years progressed, confidence grew. Auditioning as a freshman can be a nerve-wrecking experience."

Some students even embraced their confidence so much that the audition process became a breeze, despite inclement conditions. "I was always very confident because even if I messed up, it just looked better to be confident with what you are doing," said Junior Julia Wasas about her audition philosophy.

Senior Amanda Emahizer also utilized this strategy when auditioning for show choir, saying, "I was confident because even if I messed up the dance, it was okay as long as I kept in character."

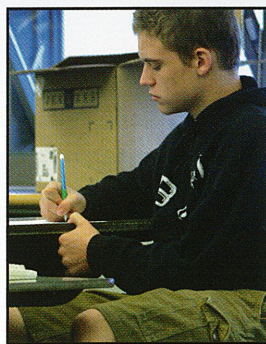

Trivia tryouts...

To assess her trivia knowledge, junior Christine Arick fills out the tryout form for Academic Quiz Team. "Jeopardy is my favorite television trivia game because it's fast and fun," said Arick. Prior to filling out the application, Arick had participated on the team for two years.

High above the ground, senior Jeff Jackson performs a split for the tryouts for a pep rally assembly that involves male cheerleaders. "I wasn't nervous because half of the boys there couldn't even touch their toes," said Jackson. Jackson developed his flexibility by stretching and hurdling during the track season.

Trivia test...

In room 418, senior Nick Luther tries out for the Academic Quiz Team. Luther said, "I accumulated my Quiz Team knowledge by watching television and movies in my free time." Luther served AQT as a sophomore and after a year off, he decided to join the competition squad once again as a senior.

Drama Ensembles

Cast performs parody of Disney hit

Most people have heard of Disney's "High School Musical", a major film phenomenon of the past two years. Its influence extended further as the inspiration for the fall drama "High School Non-Musical."

"This play caught my eye because the movie has been popular and the script seemed funny," said Mrs. Jacobs, who chose and directed the parody. Seniors Kiersten Moyes and Jordan Talmadge played the dynamic leads of Gaberella and Toy Boatin, while seniors Grace Evans and Zac Steele played the sibling roles of Shitzu and Cryin convincingly. Junior Steven Bumbarger portrayed the character Speak, and senior Kayla Robinson played Failure.

"I really enjoyed spending time with the cast; we were like a family," said Kayla when asked about the new experience.

Also new this year, a projector cast images as a backdrop rather than traditional physical sets. Both Mrs. Jacobs and stage manager, senior Maria Scheller, recalled the problematic set-up of the projector two days before opening night.

"The universe hated the production staff. It was probably the most stressful show I've worked on," said Scheller.

Despite that, everything came together in a weekend of drama.

"I'd say dramedy with a couple of bumps in the road. You come out smiling though."
Rosie Evans (9)

"It definitely isn't. I laugh more during the drama than any other time."

Talmadge performed in three fall dramas while in high school.

In an attempt to set characters Failure and Dad-Mom on the correct path, sophomore Kate Iseman, as Pino, tells them to always speak the truth. "My character was considered a creeper throughout the whole play," said Iseman. She further said, "It was interesting portraying such a dark character; I was happy for Pino in the end."

Students gain employment opportunities

Traditionally, thrifty high school students took a small part-time job to earn some extra money, and learn responsibility. Newly this year, however, some students attained the added opportunity of leaving school in the afternoon to participate in a work study program.

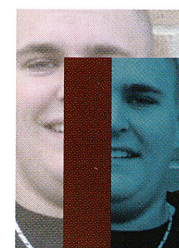

"I think the most beneficial part of the work study program was that students got to experience the world of work while still in high school," said Mrs. Marchwinski.

Students, on the other hand, found different benefits.

Voices of Fashion Speak Out

Students propose gym uniform changes

From time immemorial, the school gym uniforms have remained the same; some, such as junior Corey Krivoski, had come to terms with this.

"Why mess with perfection? The solid blue with white letters is classic," he said about what changes would make the gym uniforms more fashionable.

Even the material suited Krivoski. "The cotton feels breathable and soft to the skin."

Not everyone, however, felt the same. Some students saw room for improvement in the dark blue shirt and shorts that made up the gym uniforms.

"I would add more color to the gym uniforms," said senior John

Springer when asked what he would do differently if he could make the uniforms.

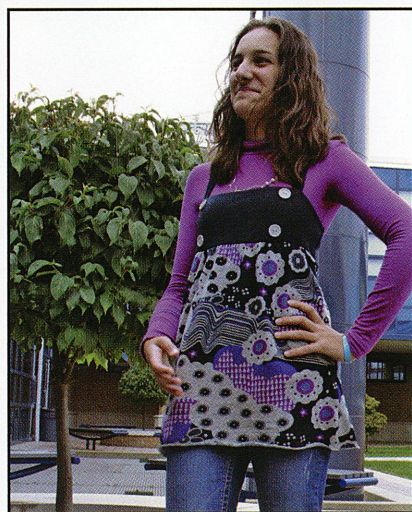

Senior Frank Brank also found the current monochromatic uniforms quite boring.

"They need a little stripe action," said Brank about how he might have jazzed them up a bit, had he designed them.

Donned in her throwback tunic, junior Jenna Herstek demonstrates fashion in the lower cafeteria courtyard. On her style, Herstek said, "I always try to keep up with the latest trends without going overboard." She further said, "I usually aim to match my outfits as much as Mr. Pityk matches his shirt and tie."

Individuality's in...

In hopes of staying warm, junior Livy Ciotoli wraps a trendy handkerchief around her face at the home football game against Woody High. On her style, Ciotoli said, "Fashion is one of my favorite forms of expression." Ciotoli purchased most of her unique clothing articles at the vintage stores in Pittsburgh.

To root on the team at the Homecoming game versus Highlands, junior Grant Pavlik, senior Ken Beck, and sophomore Matt Wygonik bare their painted chests in school spirit. "We wanted to show our school spirit and motivate the team toward a win," said Pavlik on why the crew painted up. Project Hits Low Note

Final writing project
rattles seniors

Story by Cayla Turner (12)

The dreaded affair of graduation projects inevitably came knocking at the door, reminding every over-enthusiastic student that the seniors had not quite finished yet.

Explaining her unenthusiastic stance, senior Erin Ulizio said, "It's just another thing to make seniors stress out their last year."

Luckily, peering into the rearview mirror, most seniors had experienced the entire research paper process in previous years. Added for the final project, however, an intense drive to succeed developed, because an unacceptable grade meant the writer would not graduate.

When asked about her thoughts on the infamous project, senior Chrissy Decapite said, "Teachers stress the importance of the paper to the point that my head spins! I hoped my paper was well-written, formatted correctly, and would not be the death of me."

Senior Chelsea Young had a more positive outlook and said, "I was really nervous about the paper, but excited to get it finished. My mentor was the best, so I didn't have too many problems!"

Fierce focus...

Trumpet section leader Ryan Willard performs a riff in the band's opener. Concerning competitions, Willard said, "I could never be a part of a plain old football band. Competing definitely helped me to grow musically in too many ways to count." Willard played the trumpet since age 10.

Advanced Placement Nightmares

Eager learners must narrow AP choices

Story by Kiersten Moyes (12)

"Scheduling AP classes was so difficult this year. Because I have AP Bio, I was not able to have AP English," said senior Emily Barker regarding the conflicts she faced when selecting courses for her final year of high school.

Many seniors experienced obstacles when trying to fit multiple Advanced Placement classes into their schedules. Various courses met only one period throughout the day and often at the same time as other AP classes. With colleges demanding more and more out of an applicant's qualifications, this placed strenuous decisions upon the shoulders of seniors all over the school. Some felt as if they could not demonstrate their full potential by taking all the courses they originally planned on scheduling.

"I was only able to schedule two AP courses when I wanted to take three," said senior Joe Chiodo.

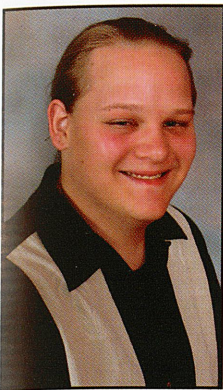

Not only did choosing between which science, math, or English class to take become an issue, but picking electives proved problematic as well.

"AP courses were scheduled during specific periods, and it conflicted with show choir and other electives I chose," said senior Amanda Emahizer. Students ultimately dealt with the discord by dropping desired courses and settling for their "second best" options.

Rock and roll...

With the mike held firm, senior Dane Farrell takes on the lead vocals with his friends on Rock Band. "I sing my best when AP's on lead, J Spring is on bass, and Ken, Rich, and Ethan play the drums simultaneously," said Farrell. On this particular song, Farrell sang Chop Suey by System of a Dawn.

Serving up college requirements

College hopefuls cater to schools' demands

Story by Kiersten Moyes (12)

"Not knowing where to apply and trying to meet deadlines was stressful," said senior Steph Yocca when describing the college application experience.

Whether planning to attend a trade school or a four year university, most seniors banded together under the pressure of approaching deadlines for post-graduation applications. Selecting a major and campus alone evoked anxiety, but with due dates thrown "into the mix, many seniors felt even more pressure.

"The deadlines were so demanding, especially if you were on an early bird program," said senior Cayla Turner.

Students had to balance ever-increasing regular homework assignments with completing endless college forms and requirements that would ultimately determine the path of their future. When the stress of performing well in current courses met the looming pressures of pursuing the next stage in life, seniors felt overwhelmed.

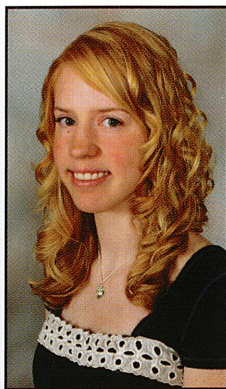

"Adding essays to write for colleges just gave me more deadlines for more homework," said senior Angela Lutheran.

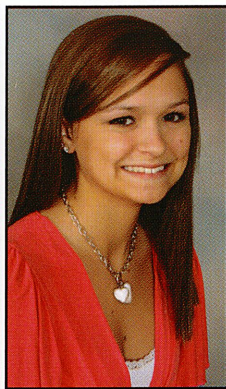

You got served...
Intently preparing for Open House, senior Lindsey Nies checks her reflection in a cookie tray. "I got to eat a lot of cookies at the event," said Nies. While at the evening function, Nies governed all of the refreshments.

With flags in hand, senior Abby Pollick and the other guard members perform the "Big-K" just before the Homecoming Game versus Highlands. "Sarah Davis and I lead the two lines across the field and we always try to race each other to our spots. It's usually a close race," said Pollick. Davis and Pollick served as colorguard heads for the 2008-09 marching season.

Freeze frame...
At the August 22 band practice, junior Julia Wasas and 8th grader Jocelin Herstek eat freezer pops to rehydrate during an afternoon break on a scorching hot day. "The pops were my favorite because they really cooled you down and they were so tasty," said Wasas. The Kiski Instrumental Boosters carefully made sure that the band and guard always experienced safe and healthy practices.

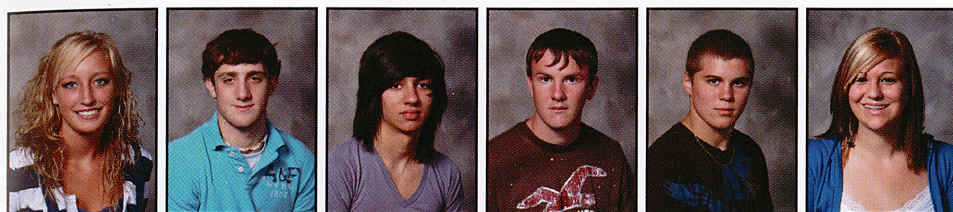

Solid stance...
In preparation for the home game against Highlands, junior Tarique Godson stretches his groin to help prevent an injury. On how he pumps up for each battle, Godson said, "I just listen to Coach and use his words to hype me up." On offense, Godson played quarterback, runningback, and wide receiver, and on defense, he played cornerback.

Fuel Efficient Cars

"I have to have a fuel efficient car. Gas prices are so high. I'm going to go broke. Just car insurance alone is bad enough. Wendy's salary does not cut it, so having a fuel efficient car is a must-have." Katie Robson Junior

"I have to have a fuel efficient car because gas prices are dramatically increasing and eventually nobody will be able to afford it." Jessica Romani Junior

"I have to have my fuel efficient car because I love it and it makes me happy." Allie Carter Junior

Story by Susan Kessler (12)

"The best thing about becoming an upperclassman was starting to plan for college and getting to eat in the lower cafeteria," said junior Kathryn Summerville about the benefits of becoming a junior and, thereby, joining the illustrious ranks of the upperclassmen.

Junior Ally Gemza agreed, saying, "The best part was the food in the upper cafeteria, it was a lot better than the other cafeteria."

Undeniably, the transition from sophomore to junior carried with it a certain gravitas, as the seniority of the upperclassmen garnered the immediate respect of the freshmen and sophomores. While some students cracked under the pressure and reverted to childhood instincts, others simply respected the leap from high school peasantry to the adolescent nobility with an appropriate feeling of conscientious authority.

Nonetheless, the lure of abusing the respect of the underclassmen did give way to certain benefits, as Devon Oblack attested to when he said, "I loved when I walked in the halls and didn't have to move around people; they moved around me because I didn't. I just kept going."

The guard consisted of 30 members that contained only four seniors.

Story by Rachel Zaydak (12)

"June Sarraf pulled a chair out of underneath me and I fell on the ground. I had a bruise on the back of my leg, but it was funny," said sophomore Brianne Smail.

A hefty bruise, not the average person's ideal birthday present, served as one of the gifts Brianne received at her party.

Sweet sixteen birthday parties existed as a popular way for sophomores to gather their friends and loved ones to celebrate this milestone birthday.

Sophomore Kayla Oliver said, "I had my sweet sixteen at the Leechburg Pool. All of my friends and family were there."

Not quite the extravagant bashes showcased on MTV's "My Super Sweet 16" reality show, these celebrations ranged from pool get-togethers in the summer to dress-up dances in the winter. The classic food selection also widely varied from catered rigatoni to pool side dishes such as hamburgers and fries.

Even with all the activities provided, some students found more reason to attend.

"My favorite thing about sweet sixteen parties was that I get a chance to mack on all the hunnies," sophomore Caleb Zaydak said.

Musically bus-ted...

Just before the buses head off to take students home, sophomore Colin Suierveld serenades sophomore Blayze Stefaniak with Breakfast at Tiffany's by Deep Blue Something. "I've been playing the guitar for about two years and I play with sophomores Jared Prusia and Blayze Stefaniak in our band, Drive-By Rabbi." The group won the Battle of the Bands held in Vandergrift at the Sons of Italy on June 14, 2008.

New freshmen discuss transition from intermediate

Story by Susan Kessler (12)

Inarguably, the transition from intermediate school to high school represented one of the most marked changes in a secondary school student's education.

For some, such as freshman Emily Summerville, this change had no down side. "It was a lot brighter and bigger, and you had a lot more freedom and opportunities," Summerville excitedly said of the transition.

On the other hand, some students did not get so swept up as to find no faults in their new learning environment.

"The only downside is that the lunches were a lot better at the Intermediate school and there's no cell phone service in the school. But you didn't hear it from me," Ryan Bachner said of the negatives of coming to the high school.

Freshman Jenny Harold agreed about the food, saying, "I hate the lunches a lot and the classes are a lot harder, particularly the honors classes."

Of course, some number of fresh-faced learners felt the typical repercussions of the move from a smaller school.

"I don't like that the school's so big. Not only was I lost the first day, I was lost for the first three weeks," said freshman Allison Guggenheimer.

Teachers begin year in healthy manner

Story by Ben Doyle, 11

To start off the school year on a healthy note, the administration treated the teachers to a health fair. The health fair took place during an in-service day before the first day of school in late August. The event contained a wide variety of local vendors that provided knowledge toward promoting better health.

"The health fair boosted the morale of the teaching staff so that we would enjoy coming to work," said Mr. Zachary Jankowski when asked to offer his opinion on the purpose of the health fair. "It sent a message toward improving employee health," said Mr. Jankowski. While at the health fair, Mr. Jankowski had his blood pressure checked, received a massage, and listened to a lecture given by the American Heart Association.

Mrs. Colleen Flick said, "The health fair gave a nice change of pace from other in-service programs. The local vendors connected the teachers to the community; not all the teachers live in the immediate area." While Mrs. Flick received a massage, she spent most of her time hula-hooping with the weighted hula-hoops at the YMCA booth.

Mr. James McKenzie and Mrs. Karen Brady both took advantage of the opportunity to get their blood pressures and cholesterol levels checked. "I found the health fair very beneficial," said Mr. McKenzie. "The health fair reminded teachers of the importance of an active lifestyle," said Mrs. Brady.

"The health fair provided resources to improve our mental and physical well being," said Mrs. Gina Bono. Mrs. Bono received a massage from a chiropractic specialist, which led her to attend a chiropractor later. "I enjoyed the health fair. I found it very worthwhile," said Mrs. Bono in agreement with the general consensus of the teaching staff.

In addition to the bone density test, teachers had the opportunity to have various other tests done.

Senior pair wins $10,000 scholarship

Story by
Kiersten Moyes, 12

"I was nervous about the judging, but it didn't seem to faze Ellie," said senior Miranda Bruno, one of the two first place winners of the Giant Eagle Retail Challenge scholarship.

Approximately 15 to 20 teams from four different schools across Westmoreland County competed in a contest to win a ten thousand dollar scholarship sponsored by the Giant Eagle franchise. Kiski's own driven seniors, who viewed the competition as a valuable prize opportunity, made up the majority of the teams present at the competition.

Mr. Duppstadt of the school's guidance staff informed curious students of the contest and gave details about what the competition would entail.

"We were given a math problem that presented two different types of coffee and one type of hot chocolate. Our job was to come up with the most efficient sale prices to market the products by that would yield the highest profit. Whichever team of two people made the highest profit won," said senior Emily Tregelles, who placed second overall in the competition alongside her teammate, senior Caroline Murray.

Ellissa Weyant and Miranda Bruno won the grand ten thousand dollar scholarship, which gave each of them five thousand dollars geared towards their future college plans. During the final stages of the competition, the highest-ranking teams gave a presentation on their research and marketing strategies.

"We were graded on a twenty point system: ten points for how much money we made, five points for teamwork, and five points for our overall presentation," said senior Ellissa Weyant.

Despite the heavy competitive atmosphere, the final teams enjoyed each other's company and loosened up for the judging procedure.

"The judges were friendly, but intimidating," said senior Miranda Bruno.

"A few had stern faces, but the lady judge seemed very impressed with our presentation. We made friends at the finale, but everyone still seemed focused on winning!"

Writers find ways to keep topics fresh

Story by Kiersten Moyes, 11

Writing papers for English can be so overwhelming. Sometimes you need to write multiple assignments in one week and it gets to be quite agitating," said senior Rachel Whitlinger in regards to her experiences with writing assignments.

For some students, writing papers for their English classes brought about feelings of dread and frustration. Balancing the workload of other courses, coupled with finding an intriguing topic for the annually required research paper made coming up with fresh content on daily essays a difficult task. Classmates alike faced pressure to invent unique and thought-provoking material that expressed the style and individuality of their own personality.

Students went to different lengths to handle the assignments given to them. Some coped with writer's block by choosing topics that appealed to their own personal interests or hobbies.

"I look for something I actually enjoy talking about or debating over. That way, it's more bearable to write or research," said senior Alicia Meredith.

Selecting topics became especially tricky for students who needed to produce multiple writing assignments within a weekly period.

Writer's Block Frustrations

"It is always a problem to write papers when I have to write more than one during a few days," said junior Kathleen Dugan. "My work starts to sound similar and my papers become too alike."

Although many people claimed to detest coming up with creative stories, others enjoyed the challenge and viewed the amount of homework as a way of self-expression through pen and pencil.

"I love writing papers, especially for English class," said senior Chrissy Decapite. "I can choose my topics, or take a given topic and write about it in my own personal way. It's a change from always being told what to do."

At the Highlands Rotary Concert, we led five other schools and were the only ones that actually knew it well," said Polka reflectively. The high school Christmas concert transpired on Wednesday, December 17.

National Runner Up

Indy trip plays on regiment's emotions

Story by
Rachel Zaydak, 12

armed with a show that local, regional, and national adjudicators recognized as having one of the most original concepts in the nation, Mr. Pityk and his regiment travelled to brand new Lucas Oil Stadium in Indianapolis to vie for their place among the nation's best. The Nationals trip to Indianapolis took place December 13 through 16, in the winter of 2008.

The excitement and emotional draw began before the eight-hour bus trip to Indianapolis. Fulfilling a play-off or championship bound team habit, the band received some traditional last words of care and inspiration.

"Before leaving for Nationals, the seniors gave their senior talk," junior Colin Martin said. "The entire band arrived an hour early for practice and the seniors got to stand up and talk to the band to say anything they wanted. It was really emotional."

Finally, the band arrived at their destination

"When we entered the stadium for preliminaries, it was our first view of the inside of the dome. The entire time, I was thinking 'Oh my God,'" said senior Ashley Zanotto. "The dome was massive and as soon as I saw the crowd, my heart stopped. In all my nine years of band, this was my first and last Nationals experience."

As if the commanding presence of the dome failed to evoke a little nervous stir in the students, the immense crowd and onlooking judges awaited an expected performance.

Lucas Oil Stadium shined down on the band members as they filed into the dome. With their faithful instruments at their sides and ready to perform their competition show, Click, the students showed off their expertise to the vast expanse of spectators.

"The only regret I have from Nationals is not making finals, but that was out of our control and I was glad just to have the experience," said sophomore Taylor Kistler.

Overall, the band placed second in their class among all bands in the entire nation.

Science project involves more than just hot air

Story by Ben Doyle, 11

In mid November, Mrs. Tara Taliani attempted to bring her students closer to the wonderful world of physical science with a project in which students created hot air balloons.

"The project was designed to study temperature, pressure, and volume's effects on gases," said Mrs. Taliani, who made the project a contest to see whose balloon could remain airborne the longest.

Students in all seven of her classes spent two days making tissue paper balloons, and on the third day, they gathered at the bottom stairwell between the lower cafeteria and the gymnasiums for the flights of their hot air dirigibles. The students held the balloons in place over an elbow section of flu pipe as two hair dryers blew hot air into the other end of the pipe. Then, after a few moments of heating the air inside the balloons, the groups released their balloons and watched the creations drift into the air for a few moments, before returning back to floor level.

After timing all of the groups' flights, Mrs. Taliani determined freshmen Miranda Ryan, Antonio Callipare, Victoria San Inocencio, and Kalie Sheaffer had the winning flight with a time of just over nineteen seconds.

"I learned more about the way a hot air balloon works. It helped me realize that when gas spreads out it creates lift," said freshman Antonio Callipare. "The project provided an enjoyable break from the rigors of Mrs. Taliani's science class."

Freshman Victoria San Inocencio also appreciated Mrs. Taliani's hot air balloon project.

"We learned the importance of teamwork," Victoria said. "We got an opportunity to apply the lessons learned. We built a device and watched it succeed."

Students nail down carpentry motivations

Story by
Emily Tregelles, 12

or those who craved the satisfaction of creating something with their own two hands, the carpentry program at the Northern Westmoreland Vo-Tech provided the perfect learning environment. While class work started on Monday, students spent most of the week in the workshop working on everything from cabinetry to houses. The program demanded a lot of involvement, but that certainly did not deter those enrolled.

Senior Rob Waltz said, "I liked that we were constantly moving and not restricted to a classroom all day."

For Waltz, the inspiration to pursue carpentry began during childhood. Although the 16 others the class might not have found interest in woodwork that early on, the shop seemed to fit perfectly for them as well.

Senior Steve Vucho said, "We got to work with our hands a lot; that's what I liked the most."

"Yeah," said Waltz, "and it was nice to have something that you made with your own hands to get recognized."

The carpentry program offered the class a head start into careers, giving them essential knowledge and skills to succeed in whatever path students chose. Surprisingly, however, not all students participated in the program in the hopes of pursuing a lifelong career in the field.

Exemplifying this notion perfectly, junior Fred Vandenheuvel liked the creativity aspect and building things, so he joined. His plans to use carpentry in the future reflected more personal reasons. He said, "I don't plan to join the union or anything; I just wanted to learn how to build my own house someday."

Cementing the validity of the carpentry program at Vo-Tech, Mr Fantaski, a mathematics teacher at the high school offered his opinion when he said, "Last year, I worked on a small woodwork project in the house at home. I certainly didn't hesitate to ask for the advice from students enrolled in the carpentry program who attended my class. Without their help, I might have never finished it."

Peek - The Future

District receives Classrooms of the Future grant

Story by Cecelia Tregelles, 12

The library, a tranquil study cove, generally found itself as the senior research paper hot spot for most of the year. However, instead of students filling its capacity, boxes occupied its great spaces as research papers began. At least early on, the library shut down and became the hub for Classrooms of the Future.

"Classrooms of the Future? What's all that?" said junior Katie Robson upon first hearing about the subject.

Part of a statewide grant, Classrooms of the Future provided monies to improve technology in Pennsylvania high schools. Altogether, the Alle-Kiski Valley schools received one million dollars to further their students' education through technology. With the finances, the administration purchased laptop carts and interactive white boards for all the major subject areas. This change had a significant impact on students, thanks primarily to the efforts of Mr. Soles and Mr. McClarnon. In some cases, it began to change the way students worked in class.

"The smart board helps because it's interactive and the laptops allow me to watch the presentation and take notes quickly at the same time," said senior Jamey Belin, a member of Mr. Smith's AP European History class.

Administration hoped the grant would wield a positive impact on the students. Additionally, several teachers raved about this new change.

"I was very excited about Classrooms of the Future because it will open a lot of opportunities and a lot of doors that we've never had access to here," said Mr. Smith.

He further said, "Technology's really the future for not just school setting education, but for most jobs, so it's very important for our kids to get their hands on this kind of equipment."

Behind the brass...

Extremely focused, sopranos of the Cavalier Choir sing A Christmas Fantasy with accompaniment from River City Brass. Senior Rachel Zaydak said, "Performing with River City Brass was a great experience. It was a lot better than the CD track!" The choir performed Hallelujah Chorus to conclude the show.

Deep thoughts...

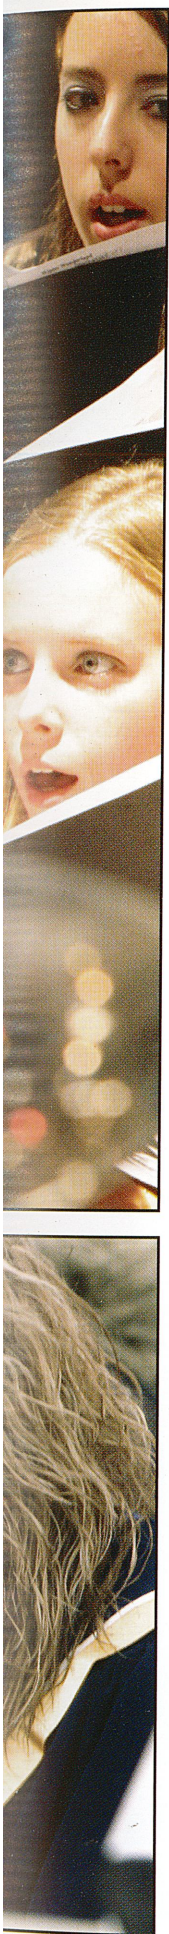

In his best Bass II voice, junior Don Gamble sings Winter's Night at Gateway High School on December 11, 2008. "It was an amazing experience. Out of all the concerts I've been involved in over the years, this one was the most memorable," said Gamble. Surprisingly, Gamble has learned music from Mrs. Hampshire every year since he attended sixth grade.

Sleepy heads...

With tired eyes, senior Amanda McDonald naps on senior Brooke King's shoulder before boarding the bus home from Gateway High School. "The concert really took a lot out of you...well it did to me at least," said McDonald. McDonald blamed her fatigue on the lights and the length of the concert.

Hug for Hampshire...
Immediately following the River City Brass concert, their director, Denis Colwell congratulates Mrs. Hampshire on the choir's performance. "Performing with River City Brass was an awesome experience. The power of the sound can't be described and the choir sounded magnificent," said Hampshire. Hampshire continued to say, "Performing with River City Brass truly became the opportunity of a lifetime."

"God doesn't promise you tomorrow, but he does promise you eternity."

Trouble in River City

Inclement weather nearly drowns chorus' big break

Story by Susan Kessler, 12

For the first time, the Cavalier Choir had the unique opportunity to perform with a renowned, professional group of musicians, the River City Brass Band, for one of the group's Christmas concerts. Little did the choir know, though, through all of the exhausting practices, the performance nearly did not happen due to inclement weather.

"It was really devastating to me when I thought we weren't going to go to the concert. I've always dreamed of being in chorus and I was finally invited to one of their gigs," said senior choir poser Jen Zatko about the ill-fated concert.

Zatko shared good company as far as disappointment; most of the chorus had similar feelings. Still, some felt a thrill of excitement at the prospect of having to stay at the school.

"I have to admit, while I was deeply saddened by the concert being cancelled,

I was really hoping for a choir sleep over," senior choir member Grace Evans said about the silver lining to this cloud.

Still, fortune favored the group; the choir tentatively boarded the choir buses and departed for the performance.

"Some people were pretty nervous about going because the bus drivers said they didn't think the roads were good enough. There were people we had to pick up on the way there because they couldn't even get out to the school in the snow," said junior Vanessa Costanza about the tension on the bus.

"I don't think anyone thought we would crash, but I think people were worried we'd get stuck or something and we'd be stuck in the buses," Costanza said.

Luckily the buses did indeed make it to the concert free of incident, and the night went forward as planned.

Commercial Arts program draws up diversity

really like the Commercial Arts program and wanted to be in it because I think it is interesting. It's all about presentation and what catches the people's eye," said junior Brittany Craver.

The Commercial Arts program offered at the Northern Westmoreland Career and Technology Center featured eight Kiski Area students for the 2008 school year. Here, the students received education on almost all art, visual and applied for commercial use, such as advertisements.

"I plan to go to college for photography. The Vo-Tech program has helped me because we take pictures and then use Photoshop to edit and alter them," said senior Kelly Starkey.

The programs high appeal shows blatantly as one flips through the Commercial Arts pamphlet. The pamphlet shows off the wide array of career path available stemming from the program ranging from "Digital Animator" to "Interior Designer", and from "Photographer" to "Special Effects".

The variety of job opportunities offered up extreme diversity. Furthermore, students enrolled in Commercial Arts included more than just those interested in digital technology. While "commercial" and "computers" may have sounded straight forwardly technological, for some enrolled in the program, it served only as a side dish.

"We do a lot of computer stuff like Photoshop," said Junior Gena Shelton. She further said, "I actually want to pursue something in fine arts, as in painting and drawing. We do a lot of different mediums. Now-a-days though for fine art in order to get a job you have to know how to use Photoshop and other computer programs well."

A cut above the rest...

In the cosmetology lab, senior Sara Kozlowski perms a mannequin's hair. Kozlowski said, "I decided to come to Vo-Tech because I enjoy being around hair and make-up." Kozlowski planned to begin her cosmetology career in South Carolina.

Contently concentrating on the task at hand, sophomore Joe Brown prepares a draft for a future project. "Vo-Tech teaches me how to work with others in the workforce," said Brown. Brown's father had a major influence on his decision to enter the carpentry field.

Art start...

In the commercial arts lab, sophomore Kate Kelm begins a block drawing of Bugs Bunny. "Commercial art is a challenging field, but all and all, it's pretty fun," said Kelm. Of all forms of art, Kelm enjoyed sculpting the most.

With greasy hands, junior Nate Mazanek checks the electrical system on a broken down truck. "I enjoy learning about cars and trucks so that I can make repairs on my truck without help," said Mazanek. Mazanek's grandpa had a huge influence on his decision to attend Vo-Tech.

In one of her CP English classes of seniors, Mrs. Bono goes over some of the graduation project requirements. "I think that period two was my hardest working class, but period DE was definitely the most unique," said Bono. Mrs. Bono also taught English to juniors.

Oh oh spaghettios...

On vacation at Lake Erie, Mrs. Bono, her husband Louis, and her daughter, Taylor, cruise the peninsula on a chartered fishing boat. "My husband went on the boat with high expectations of landing the big one. Needless to say, we had canned spaghetti that night," said Bono wittingly. Mr. Bono rewarded her with a whole day of shopping for taking the fishing excursion.

Teacher of the Year

"I'm grateful the students appreciated my efforts to make their senior year pleasant and memorable. The class of 2008 was unique for me because I taught them English in 7th grade. Being able to see them grow into adults was a genuine pleasure. I love you all. Be happy."

Chalk It Up to Great Teaching

2008 class declares Mrs. Bono "Teacher of the Year" Story by Susan Kessler, 12

"Mrs. Bono was a great teacher because she was always throwing things at people, like one time she threw a book at this kid in the hall. It was really funny and he deserved it," said junior Ben Doyle about Teacher of the Year Mrs. Gina Bono. Clearly, the indefatigable Mrs. Gina Bono left a lasting impression upon Doyle and also other members of her English classes.

Junior Nate Fryer agreed with Doyle about the best part of Bono's class. "My favorite part was when she threw stuff at students. She never hurt anyone, but she sure got their attention."

"I especially loved when she threw stuff at Matt Robison for texting," said junior Evan Conroy.

All entertaining antics aside, in a class typically known for its tedious readings, endless grammar lessons, and never ending essays, Mrs. Bono brought a certain air of humor and ease that made English class all the more fun for her students.

"I remember once when I walked into study hall and she gave me a hair magazine; it was pretty cool. It had nice styles," said the always fashion-forward junior Livi Ciotoli, sporting her trademark extremely trendy white layered coiffure, which that very same magazine almost certainly inspired.

At the end of the 2008 school year in the absence of SADD sponsor Mrs. McAfee, Mrs. Bono graciously stepped in and governed the hugely involved mock car crash held in the front parking lot of the school. Previous SADD council member, Kathryn Summerville reflected on Mrs. Bono's help with the club, "She did almost all the work on the mock crash last year, which turned out to be a helpful learning experience for all the students driving after prom. Simply stated, Mrs. Bono just truly cares about her students and it shows."

Students learn how to build a Frenchman

Story by Vince Donatelli, 11

“Associating the visual aids with the vocab helped me to learn the French words a lot easier than simply memorizing them,” said junior French II student Livi Ciotoli. “Plus, I got some really good chocolate because my group won easily,” a pumped up Ciotoli went on to say.

All games and delicious prizes aside, the French II project, lovingly dubbed the “Body Project”, provided students with a larger than life French assignment with a hint of an anatomy class mixed into the fun.

Under the guidance of the French II teacher, Madame Brady, French students, armed with an array of the best crayons and markers Crayola had to offer, arduously assembled the finest army of paper people in the land. Using their own bodies as their outlines, students traced one another with a grace that would have made Da Vinci proud.

After laying out the outlines for the bodies, students gladly whipped out packages of non-toxic crayons and washable markers and went to town, adding their own bit of individualism to their blank person. Tired out from the artistic explosion, the work for Madame Brady’s students had hardly reached its conclusion.

Once more, with exhausted limbs, the students wielded their markers and began the process of identifying and labeling each body part of their paper person using their newly learned French vocabulary. After labeling ceased on the very last little toe, reflection on a job well done began.

“The point of the French II Body Project was to allow the students to learn vocabulary related to the body and to creatively express symptoms in French,” said French II teacher Madame Brady. “Throughout the project, the students were able to help each other better understand the vocabulary because they have a vested interest in the success of the group.”

With his safety equipment fastened securely, senior Matt Bowser arc welds two pieces of stick metal together. "After I graduate, I will enter the workforce and start making good money right away," said Bowser. He believed that the earlier he began to work, the earlier he could retire.

Level-headed...

As precisely as possible, junior Mike Levandoski levels a brick onto his structure. "After I graduate, I will probably get into the construction business," said Levandoski. He attended the Vo-Tech because he really enjoyed hands-on work.

Bright Futures Ahead

Metal manics fire up ferocious futures

have never been a real big fan of normal school. I can only work with my hands, not in classroom situations, so the Vo-Tech Welding program worked for me," said senior welder Tyler Keibler. "Plus, welders make good money and I plan to get into underwater welding sometime later in my career and make some serious cash."

As students began the search for a successful life after high school, for many, the Vo-Tech program offered at Northern Westmoreland Career and Technology Center (NWCTC) enabled them to utilize their abilities to make a mark in the world.

One such career choice presented to potential Vo-Tech candidates, the extensive field of welding, seemed to make sense for many students.

"I have a ton of friends who were a part of the welding program and I also learned about it through my uncle who is a welder," said sophomore Jake Pollick, a first year student in the welding program at Vo-Tech.

"Plus, I have to admit that I do like to play with fire," said Pollick further.

Whatever may have enticed students toward the welding program, those who learned skills necessary to pass the American Welding Society standards through the Vo-Tech program hoped to secure a bright future using their specialized skill. Students even reaped the benefits of a job well done while still in high school as they took advantage of the Co-Op program run through NWCTC, which allowed them on-the-job experience and, in some cases, provided lucrative internships.

Welders in the Vo-Tech program received training in the diversified field of welding, which prepared the future welders for careers in areas such auto body, underwater, and structural steel. Masters of the blowtorch, Vo-Tech welders handled all metal that crossed their path.

Fallingwater trip inspires students

Story by Cayla Turner, 12

Designed by architect, Frank Lloyd Wright, Fallingwater has become a marvel of creativity and splendor. Established in 1935, it has since then hosted more than five million people. Third and fourth year art students received the opportunity to not only visit, but also to take in all that Fallingwater had to offer. With sketchbook and pencil in hand, students drew what they saw at the nationally revered residence.

Formerly known as the Edgar J. Kaufman Sr. residence, the house extended over a thirty-foot waterfall of trickling water. Most spectators who visited the house could not begin to adequately characterize their feelings in such an atmosphere.

When asked what she felt, senior Rachel Whitlinger said in awe, "Calm, serene, and appreciative of human creativity."

Senior James Craver said with a serene smile upon his face, "Everything was nice and peaceful. I didn't know how to describe it."

Furthermore, Whitlinger deemed the house an "architectural feat of greatness."

With much resemblance, senior Mason Tuite held it as "a beautiful piece of architecture"

New Spin on Art

Craver had a somewhat different idea of what this architecture meant to him; he responded, "It represented what I'd like to do... build buildings one day."

Like Craver, various other art students planned to engage in architecture after high school, many of which gathered inspiration from Fallingwater.

Responding to what inspired him even further about the experience, Tuite thought about it and said, "I loved going down the path where you could see the house from further away."

Talented students create holiday fashion

Story by
Cecelia Tregelles, 12

everyone knew that time of the year when costumes, ghost stories, and haunted houses suddenly appeared around every corner. Such a festive time often inspired the creativity in everyone to come alive, and making individualized shirts represented a truly great outlet for creativity. Around mid-October in room 405, that sense of holiday spirit came to life with an art assignment designed by the teachers of the class. As a project, Ms. Leezer and her students decided to make their own shirts for Halloween.

Concerning the inspiration for the shirts, Ms. Leezer said, "I painted shirts when I was a girl scout. We had so much fun doing it that I thought my class would enjoy the same activity. They loved painting the shirts."

Sure enough, the class embraced the task and tapped into their artistic talents.

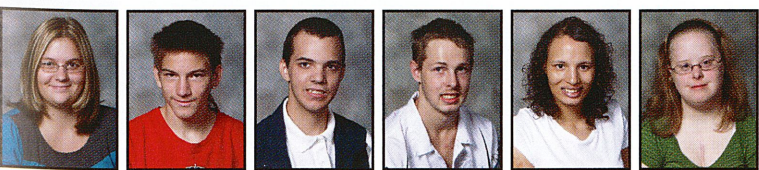

When asked about his shirt making experience, junior Brandon Barker said, "I liked picking my own design. It was a white skull with teeth on a black shirt."

Additionally, junior Allen Bopp said, "I liked using lots of colors for my shirt."

For the project, members of the Buddies program lent willing hands for advice and guidance along the way.

An appreciative junior Rachel Barkefelt said, "I liked our Buddy Kayleigh helping me."

The project encompassed a collaboration of spirit, companionship, and imagination which revealed itself in each individual shirt. However, and most importantly, the students collectively wore their shirts proudly to celebrate All Hallows Eve.

Cosmetologists reflect on colorful profession

Cut Above the Rest

The world of cosmetology bursted with creativity, free expression, and endless possibilities. From blue to blonde to green to black, cosmetologists had plenty of experience with the hands on science of hair dyeing. Senior Sabrina Thompson, for example, proudly owned up to having dyed her hair seven different colors.

Senior Ashley Sparks followed the trend and said, "I've dyed it every hair color imaginable."

However, some, such as senior April Gross opted out of such extreme lengths and said, "I've never dyed my hair, but do highlights count?"

For those daring students who loved hair dyeing and all radical forms of self-expression, the cosmetology program at the Northern Westmoreland Career and Technology Center served to provide incoming apprentices with an education that prepared them for the real world ahead.

Cosmetology students had no time for slacking, as they vigorously studied chemistry, hygiene, and sanitation to truly make themselves professionals. However, some students knew of the hard work in advance, and went into the field expecting it.

"My mother was a cosmetologist, and it seemed like a good way to work my way through college,"

Thompson said.

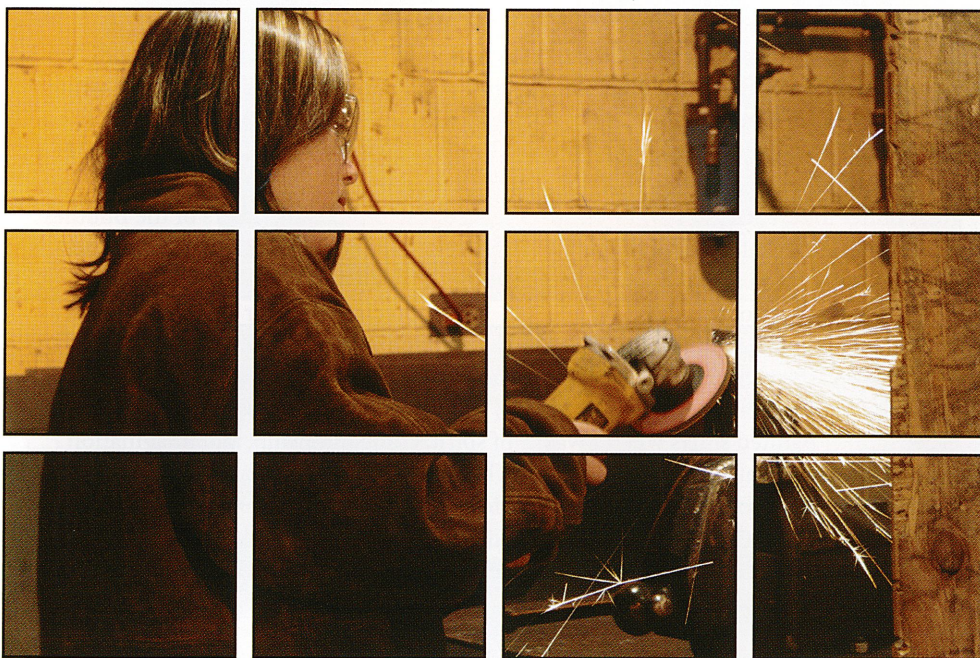

Still other students wanted the training so much that various amounts of hard work came quite easily.

Sparks said, "It's just something that I wanted to do since I was four years-old."

Always career-oriented, the students at Northern Westmoreland Career and Technology Service Center frequently had a future mapped out.

Gross demonstrated this when asked about her future plans, saying, "I hope to work in a beauty shop and maybe even teach cosmetology."

Spark of interest...
In her welding class at Vo-Tech, sophomore Ashley Patrono grinds metal for a project on welding a t-joint. "As the only female enrolled in the program, I get to pick on the other guys constantly, especially when I do better than they do," said Patrono. She decided to enter the welding program to walk in the footsteps of her mother, a welder as well.

Smoke on the water...

In his welding lab, sophomore Jacob Costa cools down hot metal. Costa said, "I chose the welding track because I wanted to learn more about it." Costa enjoyed the sense of accomplishment that he felt after he welded each piece of metal.

In assembly line fashion, Mrs. Stadler and Mrs. Fabry dish out the annual Thanksgiving feast to hungry students. Mrs. Stadler said, "The meal is hectic, but we always enjoy serving the kids." For the event, the cafeteria staff cooked 560 pounds of turkey.

District anticipates best meal of year

Story by
Emily Tregelles, 12

In any given day, students filed into lines, chatted and multi-tasked, as some caught up with friends about the latest news and even rushed to finish last-minute homework. On this particular day, however, the seats seemed a little emptier and the lines a little longer as teachers and students both flocked for a feast. The attraction? Thanksgiving dinner, or Turkey Day. Students anticipated it with good reason; it took the most preparation and work to pull off than any other meal served throughout the year.

Senior Emily Rowley said, "I remember in elementary school how this day was my absolute favorite meal."

The cafeteria staff started about two weeks in advance, preparing food not only for the high school, but also for most of the elementary schools. Cooking commenced about a week in advance, because of the vastness of the task. This November, the kitchen workers prepared about 560 pounds of turkey, 48 gallons of gravy, and 330 pounds of stuffing, a feat by no means small, considering that they made the stuffing totally from scratch. Of course, the workers also topped the meal with pumpkin pies. The avid bakers made 302, after which they scored them into even pieces for cutting. Hence, finding the biggest slice proved more difficult than previously believed. Only the occasional misguided knife provided a rare fluke.

On receiving the news of the unlikelihood of finding such a find, senior Cecilia Tregelles said, "Well, I must be a fluke finder!"

After the students finished up, the ladies of the cafeteria began the cleanup, a process that took a little longer than any other usual day. Upon completion of the massive amounts of trays to wash and gravy to wipe up, the cooks of the cafeteria sat down to feast as well. One of the ladies, Glenda Givens said, "We looked forward to eating the leftovers when all clean-up was done."

To complete his turkey dinner, senior Joe Brank chooses pumpkin pie for his dessert. Concerning Thanksgiving dinner at school, Brank said, "Who wouldn't get excited when you look at the monthly lunch calendar and find turkey dinner for today?" Out of school, Brank has hunted turkeys around Bell Township, but has yet to bag one.

Hungry Hands

Lunch ladies provide pre-game sustenance

Story by
Vince Donatelli,
11

Friday nights in autumn mostly meant one thing, football. As the lights blazed bright high atop the hallowed grounds of Davis Field, the battle raged down below. Determined and motivated, a collection of some of the school's finest athletes fought on, late into the night. Worn, torn and tattered, those members of the team gave their all. However, the athletes on the football team took their energy from more than just motivation and hard work alone.

Behind the scenes every Friday night worked another finely tuned machine, the lunch ladies who comprised the Kiski Area High School Food Service.

Junior Jordan Zito said, "With the lunch ladies hard work ethic, I believe many of them could have earned a spot on the offensive line."

Going above and beyond the call of duty, these women worked extra hours to provide the hungry players with hearty, rib sticking meals, usually consisting of pasta and salad. While this greatly pleased some, others did not necessarily feel the same way.

"It got kind of old after a while," said junior tackle Chris Cernicky. "Do not get me wrong, the wonderful lunch ladies gave an all out effort, pasta just did not do it for me."

Also in agreement, junior linebacker Ben Yaconis said "It was always the pasta. The same old thing every single Friday."

After demolishing their hearty pre-game meal and giving their thanks to the Food Service staff, players shifted focus to the task at hand, the game.

Yard by yard...

Performing the famous Heisman pose, senior Brandon Sofaly stiff-arms a Fox Chapel defender during the game on September 26. "After the catch I just do whatever I can to get up field," said Sofaly. Sofaly played both receiver and defensive back during his high school career.

All jacked up...

In the middle of Davis Field, junior Dan Landowski and his teammates warm up for the game against Highlands. Landowski said, "It was very important to warm up before each game because it helps you to perform better and avoid injuries." Landowski played guard for the offense.

Henley, heart of trainer staff

"It's definitely always interesting, but it's fun. It's cool to be the man of the training room," said senior Zach Henley, the first male participant to grace Kiski's group of trainers in years.

The training team has always consisted mainly of female members with few male participants to join the team throughout past years. Trainers aided injured players from most sports around the school, helped out with the dehydrated, and kept the training room organized. However, only women dominated the training team each year and took care of these tasks on a regular basis, until Henley arrived.

"I think the reason there are so many females that participate is because there are mainly boy sports that we train for. Guys would rather play in the game than train it and watch other guys play," said junior Jilian Stone. "But it's a great program, and I learn a lot every year while having fun doing it."

Still, the lack of testosterone did not stop Henley from joining this vital group of students, and he participated in the activity without facing discrimination.

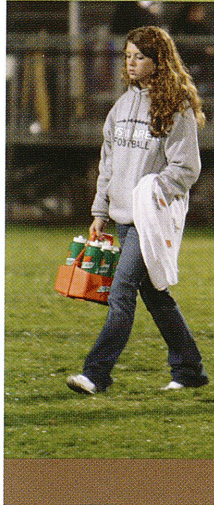

"I love sports, but I'm not good enough to play. This way I could still be a part of the games and help the team out," said Henley. "I'm too loved to face discrimination."

The other trainers enjoyed Zach's company and felt relieved at times to have a charismatic male member of the team on board to keep things grounded and interesting.

"Zach keeps it fun," said senior Kayla Robinson. "A ton of girls together can be dramatic and crazy and we just have a different mind frame than he does. He has the same career plan as the majority of the rest of the other trainers, which is something medical based. He fits right in, just like one of the girls!"

Tick Tick Boom

Players serve up favorite motivational cheers

Story by
Rachel Zaydak,

"It involved extreme screaming, animal noises, and the squeaking from skin on floor contact," said sophomore Tori Feydt.

The scene stated above describes not a zoo or a chaotic glimpse of dozens of kids running throughout a playground. It exemplifies the essence of the girls volleyball team in action. What may appear to make this scene seem like an out of control mess actually worked as an important organizational and energy-boosting tool.

Yes, volleyball encompassed mostly the bump, the set, and the hit. However, one more ingredient to every match and practice really made the game special for both players and spectators. The sound factor served as a crucial part of volleyball's high-energy status.

Every achievement on the court had a corresponding cheer counterpart. For every ace (a serve that the opposing team did not return) a stomp and clap routine ensued. For every kill (a spike resulting in a point) Felicia Reid said, "Tick. Tick. Boom!" Furthermore, accompanying every block came a "Woop! Woop!" These brief cheers may sound silly to some, but they served an important purpose in motivating the girls.

Sophomore Felicia Reid said, "The calls got the team excited and motivated. When we relaxed and had fun we usually did well. The cheers brought confidence and better games followed. We could focus on the game without worrying about unnecessary things."

According to the players, a referee's call possessed the power to either make or break the attitude on the court. Still, the girls definitely utilized their voices to encourage each other toward victory.

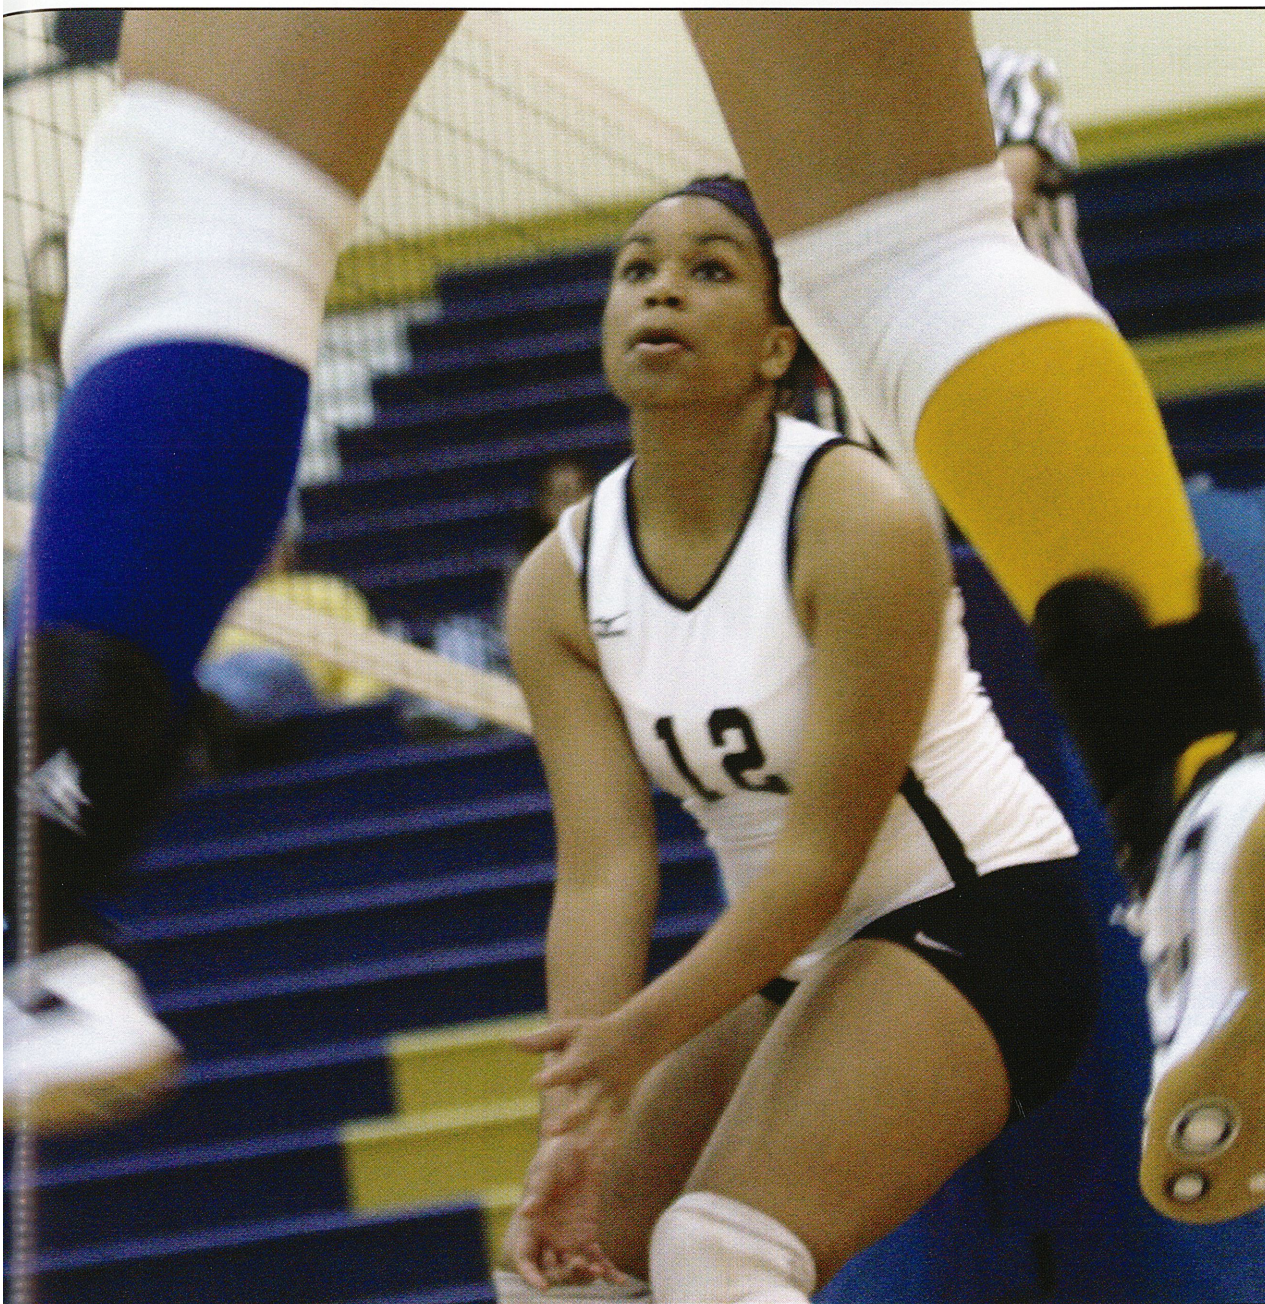

Senior moment...

At the team's senior night, senior Karly Thompson stands with her parents on the sidelines to receive recognition from the crowd. Concerning team nicknames, Thompson said, "We call Jaimi Hicks Noodle because when she plays, her arms flop around like cooked noodles." Sophomore Felicia Reid and junior Stephanie Hager escorted Thompson on to the court.

Pinky promises...

Hand in hand before the last home game, seniors Jaimi Hicks and Karly Thompson prepare for battle against the Hempfield Spartans. On the event, Hicks said, "I thought I was going to be more emotional than I was. I actually didn't end up bawling until the last game against Franklin Regional." The team retired a total of eight seniors after the season ended.

Athletes unveil unique pre-competition rites

"Some people have weird traditions before they compete," said junior Jocelyn Reid when questioned about what strategies track team members used to enhance their performance. "I know some guys who shave their legs fresh for every meet," said Reid.

Naturally, all sports teams desired to have good luck with them during intense moments of competition, but this did not necessarily mean that the teammates indulged in lucky numbers, coins, and rabbits' feet.

For track and field members, split seconds and inches determined the winners of competitions. Not surprisingly, superstitious traditions and habits, therefore, often made appearances before games and major events.

"I sometimes do things a certain way before I step into the circle and throw," said junior Steve Golembiewski, who might not necessarily have supported any superstitions per se, but willingly admitted to his own quirks.

Regardless of whether or not the habits worked, luck certainly wiggled its way into the competitors' performances in some strange, and some not-so-strange forms.

The track team members told other stories of pre-game rituals that competing schools admitted to practicing. These ranged from the supernatural to the down-to-earth.

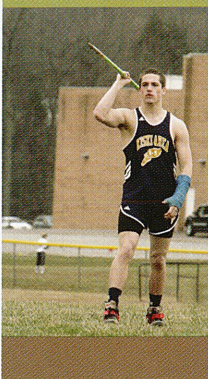

"I recall seeing many students do the sign of the cross before a race or students listening to their favorite song," said Golembiewski.

Whether good luck or not factored into their performances, unique superstitions and habits appeared to catapult some track stars in the competitive zone.

Tennis Tournament

Players bemoan sandy courts

Story by
Susan Kessler,
12

"The sand in the courts is really bad; we need new courts really badly. It's hard to go from sand courts to regular courts everyday when we have matches," said junior Danielle Dulick about the much bemoaned tennis courts at the school.

The sand in the courts caused a common complaint amongst tennis players and gym students alike, as they felt the inconvenience of the sand grains. Students frequently complained of the way that the sand flew in their eyes on particularly windy days and made them slip while running on the courts.

"The worst part is that there are some worn holes in the court and they fill up with sand. Then, if the ball hits that spot, it's dead and there's no way to return it," said Dulick, still fuming about the difficult courts.

Senior Cassie Fallecker agreed wholeheartedly when she said, "They're hard to play on; sometimes the ball bounces unevenly and that's annoying. After you play there's a mound of sand in your shoes," she said with a chuckle.

Still, every cloud has its silver lining. "I'll admit it. The nice thing about the courts is that we have the only ones that you can play on after the rain because the sand absorbs the water, so that's a good thing," Dulick said.

For the tennis team, this may have seemed like a significant advantage, but for regular gym students who did not play outside in the rain anyway, the benefit failed to make up for the annoyances.

"Playing tennis was a good gym class, but the sand made it harder, at least I like to think that cause otherwise I was just really terrible," said senior Chrissy Decapite about her tennis experiences.

Quick crush...
Just after arguing over the previous call, junior Evan Conroy spikes the ball confidently against his Fox Chapel opponent. Regarding the match, Conroy said, "We won the first set and it was the only set we won against the Foxes all season long." Conroy further said, "The best team in the section was Shady Side, but Fox Chapel was the toughest to play."

A point saved is a point earned...
Focusing on the ball, junior Shane Haugh tries to save the point with a forehand. On his strongest stroke, Haugh said, "Backhand just feels the most natural to me." Haugh usually played singles, but preferred to partner with junior Evan Conroy in doubles.

Enjoying Debris

Story by
Emily Tregelles,
12

Teammates start practices with clean routine

Traditionally, players and fans alike viewed the actual competition most important in any sport, with practices representing an added annoyance that allowed the players to succeed later. However, the soccer team did not share in this view, enjoying practices and games equally.

Senior Jessica Wasas said, "My favorite part of practices were ladders."

However, in order to get on the field to practice in the first place, the players faced the unappealing task of clearing it of agrarian debris, no simple task. Unfortunately for the players, an assortment of animals obstructed the practice grounds on a regular basis.

The teammates recalled a memorable experience of finding a cat on the field. However, the clearing of some animals happened so frequently, it became part of the everyday lives of the players.

The soccer fields became known as the most popular site for geese gatherings and their consequential droppings. As it turned out, the geese loved the fields just as much as the players, but what the geese chose to do on the field resulted in nothing but aggravated memories and dirty cleats.

Junior and team manager Joe Stopansky said, "We just want the geese to stop leaving their fecal matter on the field; I don't think it's too much to ask."

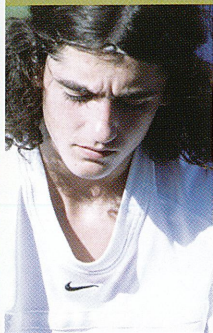

Unfortunately, the birds did, indeed, see this as far too much to ask. Consequently, through the whole season, the task of clearing the field fell on the aggravated and somewhat inhumane shoulders of the players.

"We just started punting balls at them. Once, we actually hit one," said Wasas of the goose cruelty she perpetrated.

Like a brick wall...

In a game against the Hampton Talbots, junior Olivia Graham and seniors Jessica Wasas and Grace Evans form a human wall to prevent a penalty kick goal. Graham said, "It's not exactly a good time placing yourself between the kicker and the net, but it's a sacrifice you make for the team." Graham played right fullback for the varsity team.

Certain images always come to mind when thinking about high school. One common thought involves the perky cheerleader, her bubbly smile, short skirt, and white sneakers, all affixed to her body painted in school colors. Certainly, all students shared this image, burned into their brains, but not all students necessarily felt the same way about it.

"The cheerleader thing has always been a bit iffy to me. It just seems a little weird. Some people are into it, but there are just a lot of stereotypes surrounding it, and it's hard to overlook that," said senior Kiersten Moyes when asked to give her opinion of cheer leading.

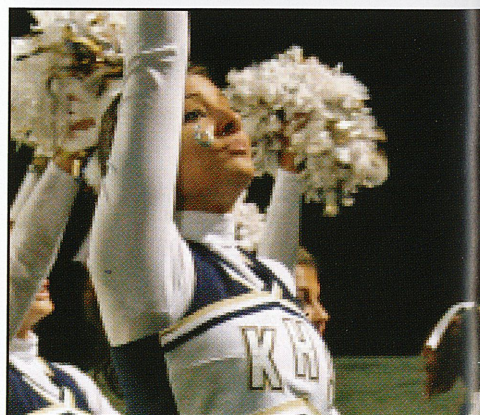

As it turned out, many students shared this view, that the girls themselves may defy the stereotype, but that the notion still existed for a reason.

"I like don't get how like people are always saying cheerleaders are like dumb or whatever. We're totally not. Like, I get like really good grades, and stuff. And, like, I don't know, it's like the cheerleaders get like a really bad rap for being dumb and like perky or whatever. It's like really hurtful! Just because we're prettier than everyone else doesn't mean we don't have feelings," senior Jen Zatko sarcastically said about the effects of these stereotypes on the cheerleader's psyche.

Nonetheless, many students found it difficult to ignore some aspects of the cheerleader image that made the girls particularly vulnerable to stereotyping.

"I think it's the uniforms that do it for me. They're just so high school. It's really hard to take someone seriously when they're wearing that," Moyes said.

Big comebacks...

Firing the ball to first base, senior Lauren Yohe throws out a Leechburg base runner during a scrimmage. Concerning her nagging shoulder injury, Yohe said, "I had to work really hard to get back to where I was and prove myself again." The outside fast ball served as Yohe's favorite pitch.

Face the music...

Totally focused on the catcher's signal, junior Tarra Oravec prepares to deliver a fast ball. Oravec said, "Wearing the mask is optional. I chose to wear it because it makes me feel safer on the mound." Oravec revealed that she once hit a line drive right into the mask of an opposing pitcher. Even with the mask, the girl received a black eye.

Girls demolish stereotypes with dominating attitude

The district's softball team matched its baseball team in popularity among the female members that made up the squad. The familiar scene of sliding to home base, hitting balls with a bat, and catching airborne objects with mitts fit both the baseball and softball sport description. Yet, baseball tended to obtain the focus of viewers when it came time to choosing which sport to watch.

The girls of the softball team radiated passion for the game, regardless of gender stigmas. When asked why softball did not meet the qualifications of a major-league sport, senior Emily Rowley said, "The world has yet to realize just how amazing girls are at the sport of softball."

Many of the teammates hardly noticed the differences that existed between baseball and their own sport of softball, other than the obvious gender difference. However, there still remained a couple of noticeable distinctions between the two sports.

"The size of the field is different in baseball, the pitches are different, and so is the size of the ball. Also, the way the ball is thrown by the players is different," said senior Ashley Zanolto.

Softball had the potential to shine as brightly as baseball as the drive of the teammates led them through the competitions of the season. Despite obvious differences, the excitement of the game remained the same despite the fact that softball lacked the title of a major-league sport.

"I'm not sure...I hope so though. It really is a very intense game and should be taken more seriously than it is," said Zanolto about the future of the sport of softball.

She further said, "Sports are for both genders, not just males!"

Congratulatory high five...
Just after rounding the bases in a crushing hit to the left field, Coach Haney welcomes senior Lindsey Nies back to the bench with a high five. Coach Haney said, "Every one of my girls has it in them to hit the big one. It's always a thrill to see them execute it." Nies played second base for the varsity team.

Team competitions allow for varied opinions on best courses

Story by
Cayla Turner,
12

Perhaps one of the most expensive sports to play, members of the boys and girls golf team had the rare opportunity to compete on many different courses throughout the area. Given so many choices, the golfers certainly formed opinions and favorites about the greens.

Junior Steve Golembiewski wasted no time in stating his favorite golf green.

"Fox Chapel was the best because their greens are fast," said Golembiewski. As listed at golfink.com, the Fox Chapel Golf Club ranked number five of the top golf courses in Pennsylvania.

During the fall season, the boys golf team competed only once at the Fox Chapel course.

Unlike Golembiewski, senior Jessica Wawrzyniak favored the Pittsburgh Field Club most of all.

"I love that course because the average golfer usually doesn't get the chance to play there. The fee to play is really high."

She further said, "Compared to our home greens at Vandergrift, Pittsburgh is the Taj Mahal and the Vandergrift course is the Monroeville Mall." Wawrzyniak remembered performing well on the course, considering its difficulty.

Due to different reasons, senior Dessie Mitcheson preferred the Pittsburgh Field Club also. Delving further, Mitcheson said, "Quite honestly, I'll play on any course that doesn't have lakes or ponds. For some reason, water always acts as a magnet for my ball."

Reflecting the opinion of various others, sophomore Brandin Hilty chose the Oakmont Country Club course as his favorite.

Hilty said, "It was a true accomplishment to play on the same course that held the 2007 U.S. Open. The course is really difficult, and you really have to focus to succeed there."

Going green...

In deep concentration, senior Dessie Mitcheson reads the green in order to sink her putt. Mitcheson said, "It's a lot harder than it appears because the greens are so unpredictable." Mitcheson preferred driving the ball to putting it.

Dessie destruction...

Just after avoiding senior Dessie Mitcheson's ball that whizzed by her head, senior Jessica Wawrzyniak uses her lucky four-iron to drive the ball. Offering good advice, Wawrzyniak said, "Set your feet right, and always be aware of where Dessie lurks." Shortly afterward, Mitcheson's ball hit Wawrzyniak in the leg.

He is like a professional speed-walker whenever we walk courses." Due to injuries, Aljoe didn't run the race but enjoyed cheering on her teammates.

Clean sweep?

Covered in mud, junior Kristi Titler attempts to clean off her legs after racing in the Slippery Rock Invite. On tending to her own injuries, Titler said, "Trainers are some of the most important resources we have. Without them, we couldn't do a lot of things." Her most devastating mishap involved an injury to her knee that hindered her ability to run.

Rain Pains

Story by
Ben Doyle, 11

Runners render rare recoveries

During the course of the season, the unrelenting cross country runners pushed their bodies to their extreme physical limits on a regular basis. Naturally, the grueling process of getting into shape had its price, sore muscles.

Conditioning for cross country consisted of a variety of different workouts. Distance days forced runners to endure the longest run of the week, which could required up to ten miles. Hill workouts meant the team took a trip to Northmoreland Park to dare some of the largest hills the area had to offer, continuously until the workout ended.

"After a hill workout, you could find me on my bed playing my Playstation 3 and not much further," said senior Tyler Kiebler when asked what he does to deal with pain.

A track workout required the runners to complete multiple laps on the track at a rigorous pace that they had to maintain.

"The fast pace of a track workout took a toll on my body, so afterwards I liked to spend some time with my ladies. They had a way of taking my pain away," said senior Chris Stankay.

This overall variety of workouts ensured many of the members would have numerous aches and pains. Still, the runners utilized even more interesting methods of coping with their ailments.

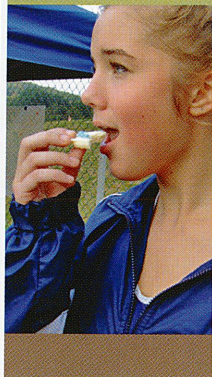

"When I got back from a hill workout, I took a long, hot bath. That way I could walk in the morning," said junior Kristi Titler.

"There is only one way to get rid of the pain of a tough workout, I covered it up with the pain of doing homework," said sophomore Madison Rumon.

Dodge the Tag

Players wage war in pregame dodge ball antics

Story by
Vince Donatelli,
11

Nestled away in the deepest, darkest depths of the athletic wing resided the heart and soul of the beast, more commonly referred to as the varsity and junior varsity baseball teams. Safely isolated from the rest of society, the baseball locker room acted as more than simply a place to change before and after practice, as it quickly evolved into a boisterous beacon of inspiration. Driven by the high octane mixed CD passed down from generation to generation, the mood transformed into something electric. With power ballads from awe inspiring artists such as Afro Man, Rupert Holmes, Aqua, and Wheatus blaring out of the sacred boom box, inspiration flowed freely.

As players began to get pumped up, focus shifted to the game, the all-important game of dodgeball.

Junior Jay Engler said, "What I loved most about the baseball locker room had to be hiding in the dark in my locker as the dodge balls flew. I seriously jacked some people up."

Mysteriously, dodge balls seemed to find their way back in the locker room, even after several confiscations, strengthening this time honored tradition. As if to signal impending doom, the lights went off and those without any ammunition ducked for cover.

"Just the thought of the lights going out in the locker room is not a good feeling. But, then you hear dodge balls flying by your head and you know its time to jump into your locker," said junior catcher and pitcher Ben Doyle. "On the plus side, as the year went on, I developed Clark Kent-like locker changing skills."

With arms loosened up and emotions running high, the time came to, in the words of the singer Afro Man, "Have a good time."

Block formation...
To warm up their legs, the varsity baseball players perform calisthenics in the outfield during pregame warm-ups. Senior Will Nelson said, "It is key to warm up your legs because you use them for everything in the game." After their game, the team cooled down to a similar routine.

Swing for the fence...
Following through with his swing, senior Corey Stascak drives a fastball to left field during a home game against Pine Richland. "When I swing, I pretend like I'm using a tennis racquet," said Stascak. He further said, "Coach Hixenbaugh really helped me to improve my swing."

Hoopsters welcome off-season regiment

A passerby could hear the screech of basketball shoes on the gym floors all year-round. Open gym workouts required the boys basketball team to take time out of their schedules, even during the early summer months. Starting shortly after the conclusion of the winter sports season, open gym workouts offered the opportunity for the players to retain mid-season form.

"We had a few weeks of break after the last season, then open gyms started in mid-March," said senior Ryan Matviko. He further said, "Then we had open gyms two or three times a week, usually on week days during the evening."

"We did not have to attend every workout. We treated them as low-stress practices, so I could miss a few due to other obligations," said junior Steve Golembiewski.

Open gym workouts consisted of free shooting, dribbling drills, speed drills, and scrimmages.

"The workouts required a lot of hard work, and the majority of my free time. The scrimmages made the workouts worthwhile, though," said junior John Chepkevich.

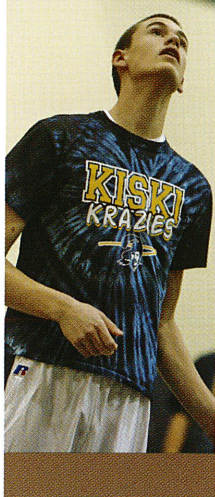

On occasion, guests attended the open gyms. Former players graced the current players with their presences during some of the open gyms. These former players included Greg Hutcherson, Chris McKillop, Matt Molinaro, and Corey Smith. Other guests included members of Burrell's and Highlands' varsity basketball teams.

"We always enjoyed when the older guys came back. I grew up watching them play, so playing scrimmages against them provided extra motivation," said Ryan Matviko.

"We welcomed the attendance of players from other districts. Playing scrimmages against them made for good competition," said sophomore Zach Vogel.

New Courtship

Girls basketball team discovers uncommon camaraderie

Story by
Emily Tregelles,
12

The girls basketball season started out with a big change, a new assistant coach, but the tight-knit team could easily handle such stress. Indeed, the team developed a reputation for feeling a particular camaraderie.

This sense of togetherness helped to propel them through another year, which included great honors such as a request to attend the invitation only Roundball Classic Tournament in December. The trip generated many stories worthy of made for TV movies, which showed off the groups camaraderie even more.

To encourage this sense of fellowship, the coaches instituted a sort of dream box, which consisted of a pretzel jar, into which members placed items that represented the goals of the team. One particularly poignant example involved one member putting grass seeds into the jar with hopes of inspiring the team's growth. The team's seniors added their own special contribution, stacks of pennies.

Their coach, Mr. Kallock, gave the seniors the pennies with the instruction to insert one before each game. The idea conveys that the little things add up.

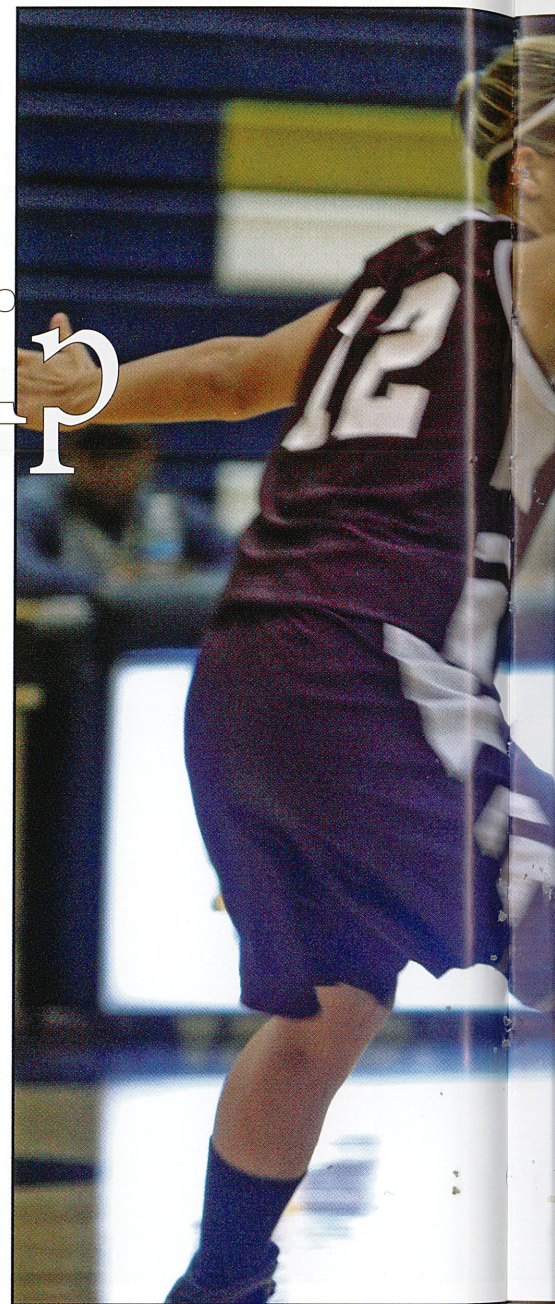

“It was a really good idea, really sweet,” said senior Samantha Yocca.

“Wow,” said senior Kayla Weiser, “it's really sad, actually; all my pennies were gone so fast.” The strong bond created bittersweet memories for the seniors as they saw their pennies dwindling. Nevertheless, the girls maintained a good, down-to-earth attitude towards the season.

When asked about the team's performance in the season, senior Lindsey Nies said, “We played well and won the games we should have.”

Nies frees...

Keeping her elbow to her side, senior point guard Lindsey Nies focuses on her free throw attempt during a home game against the Plum Mustangs. “I usually shoot a lot of foul shots each game because as the point guard, I always get fouled with the ball,” said Nies. She also played second base for the varsity softball team.

B-e-aggressive...

In the middle of the second quarter, senior Ellie Weyant plays defense on the ball. Weyant said, “You need intensity and aggressiveness to cause your opponents to make mistakes. Good defense leads to easy offense.” The varsity girls won the game by a score of 55-52.

Ice warriors discuss practice inconvenience

"It takes about an hour just to travel to the rink and back," said junior Fred Schultz. "Sometimes there's practice right after school and you're late because by the time you get off the bus, you're so rushed and you barely have any time to make it to the rink."

Having an off-campus location created an obstacle for many of the hockey team members. Because the high school provided no means of transportation, the teammates relied on their own methods to travel to and from their games and practices.

The men on ice held their home games at Delmont Center Ice, located roughly fifteen minutes from the school campus. Practices occurred three to four times a week, not including travel hockey. With no funds for transportation from the school, traversing became an inconvenience for many players.

Those who faced little irritation about the off-campus location still agreed that the school should aid the hockey team with the necessary money.

"I would like it if the school would pay for our ice time," said sophomore Nick Faletti.

Team members felt a lack of support from the school due to the minimal funding.

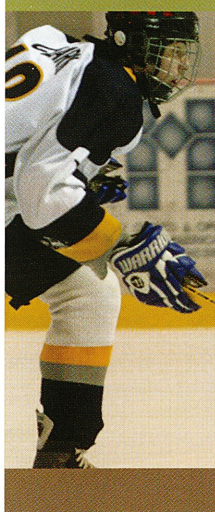

"The school doesn't support the hockey team in any way. We pay for everything with our own money," said senior Luke Kopchak. "It would be nice for the school to give us some money because it's an expensive sport."

The hockey team also gained no recognition within the school itself. Many players felt inferior to the school's other winter sports, as well as disconnected from the school's other noteworthy teams.

"They don't give any money towards the team or even announce the game results on the announcements. Half of the people in the school probably don't even know there is a hockey team," said Schultz. He further said, "I wouldn't change anything about hockey itself, but the school could at least help us out."

In the far lanes of the pool, Coach Scott instructed and gave the junior varsity swimmers a workout on their strokes and form. In the closer lanes, Coach Hartman pounded his varsity swimmers with workouts full of heavy yardage. Then, squeezed in the middle Coach Gais instructed the divers who, in addition to practicing their dives, must dodge the swimmers passing below. Even the balcony came alive at a swimming and practice, where wrestlers ran and conditioned.

In addition to the evident water factor, several other differences separated swimming and diving from the other sports at the school.

"I think swimming is different than any other sport because it requires so much technique and energy in the water. We worked every muscle group. It's a lot harder for a person who doesn't swim to get in the water and try to do a workout than for a swimmer to get out of the water and play a different sport," said sophomore Nick Bertha.

So who could coach this unique sport? Surely, this individual must have his/her own unique qualities.

"Probably one of my favorite times at swimming was when after this one Saturday practice we had a huge snowball fight with Coach Hartman. Every time someone aimed for him he threatened to give us a really hard practice, but everyone hit him, or tried to hit him anyway. I think even his car took some hits," said junior Chris Cernicky.

The junior varsity coach, Mr. Scott proved to possess a few quirks as well.

Senior Amy Gawn said, "Mr. Scott has a funny tradition. Every year, at our last practice before Christmas break, he dressed up in this ridiculous looking Santa outfit and coached in it the entire practice."

Water wings...

To improve her endurance, senior Kelly Horrell pushes herself during the final stretch of the 100m backstroke in practice. "In meets, I swim the 200m and 500m freestyle. They're long and hard," said Horrell. She also said, "I really love the adrenaline rush that swimming gives me."

Breath of fresh air...

Gasping for air, senior Sabrina Hyde acclimates off the wall during a butterfly race. Hyde said, "Backstroke is my favorite stroke because it's really the only stroke that I can actually do." Hyde also swam backstroke in the medley relay, the 200 individual relay, the 200 free relay, and the 100m backstroke.

Bundle of joy...

After reentering the circle, sophomore Bill Emerick holds in referee's position to restart the match. "I really like the bundles move because it's tight and painful," said Emerick. Emerick pinned Julian Carter from Penn Hills late in the first period.

On the move...

At a home meet on January 6, junior Beau Grzybek throws a leg-in to gain points to win the match against Scott Ray from Kiski Prep. "I like to run the guillotine move. It eventually pins the opponent," said Grzybek. Grzybek wrestled 135 that evening, but usually wrestled at 130.

Story by
Cayla Turner,
12

Wrestlers wage war against disease

Among other gross names, Staphylococcal infections stood as the most common type of mat infections that could give wrestling a bad name. MRSA (methicillin-resistant Staphylococcus aureus) alone hit the public with a bang. Folliculitis, boils, impetigo, and cellulites hit the charts high also.

Wrestlers came into especially close contact with each other countless times during the season. Among other problems, this made it disturbingly easy to catch a nasty mat infection.

The home competitors, however, managed to buck the trend, avoiding the physical and social stigma of infectious diseases.

When asked whether he had ever contracted a mat infection, junior Jordan Zito replied, "No, and I intend to keep it that way."

That may sound surprising with the close quarters the wrestlers kept. Still, the answer to avoiding a disease became a simple one; junior Donnie Gamble said, "I showered after practice every single day and when I went home."

Additionally, managers advised wrestlers to wear skin protection, use towels only once, and to practice in clean and dry clothing. Unfortunately, some wrestlers had no choice but to wrestle an infected person.

Junior Mike McCutcheon said, "The kid had mad herpes on his face."

However, much like the remainder of them, McCutcheon had steered clear of mat contaminations. The common person would certainly fear mat infections, but what of the wrestlers themselves?

Junior Adam Rosensteel and McCutcheon both said, "We're not fearful of them, we just do things we have to do to prevent them."

On the contrary, Gamble said, "Yeah, of course I'm fearful of them."

Going to the mat took strength, agility, and serious personal hygiene. It most definitely showed that these wrestlers took the necessary precautions to stay healthy and on the mat.

Last leg...
At the January 7 match against the Penn Hills Indians, junior Justin Harold takes down James Lennon in the home gym. Concerning his signature move, Harold said, "I like the single-leg-takedown because for me, it's the easiest way to score points." The match ended victoriously for Harold with a pin in the second period.

Tangled torment...
Just after his opponent, Josh Bachetti from Penn Hills, shot in on him, junior Josh Yamber readjusts his hips to go for a take-down. On tangled bodies, Yamber said, "Sometimes you have to scramble to stay in good positions." Yamber recognized the Gateway Gators as the crew to beat so his team could secure second in the section.

Campus contemplations...

Casually sitting on the sidewalk at Waynesburg College in July of 2008, senior Davina Hefflin contemplates her role in producing a Campus yearbook. "After attending the workshop, I truly realized how much other schools envy our book. Everyone approached us for advice on their books as if we were the experts. It really makes you appreciate what you have," said Hefflin. To learn the ins and outs of yearbook creation, senior Susan Kessler led Hefflin, junior Fawn Armagost, and sophomore Katie Iseman at the Taylor Publishing workshop that aimed to better the yearbooks in the tri-state area.

Campus chatter...
Ready to broadcast Campus yearbook functions to students all over Waynesburg College, senior Editor-in-Chief Jordan Talmadge speaks candidly with DJ Joshua Green on their morning show entitled "Morning Buzz." "It was great being exposed to the live broadcast. I felt like Randy Bowman from WDVE," said Talmadge. The editorial staff traveled to Waynesburg College for their annual High School Media Day held on Thursday, October 30, 2008.

Without Hesitation

Chief editor unveils theme specifics

Inspired by a font on a poster from the San Francisco Conservatory of Music hanging on the music bulletin board, the 2009 theme, "Without," originated. With the help of the technology department head Mr. DeLuca, the staff actually created a new font to carry as a graphic through the book. To improve upon the student coverage, prior to the 2009 school year, the yearbook club members asked each student, "What can't you live without?" As a major design aspect of the book, the layouts featured a vertical strip on the right side of each spread to display the answers.

"If I typed one more cell phone, friends, or iPod, I would've impaled myself with a dull pencil," said senior "Without" Coordinator Maria Scheller.

On a lighter note, senior Robert Hutton revealed that he could not live without his stomach hair because "it's like a free Halloween costume."

Answers ranged from body organs to material possessions and everything in between. Family, friends, and love served as the cliché sentimental answers while the class clowns responded with answers such as nothing, myself, and Mahatma Gandhi.

"If it weren't for Gandhi, no one would know that an eye for an eye makes the whole world blind. I don't want to live in a world where no one has eyes," said senior Susan Kessler.

Despite the effort required to collect and record the typical, heart-warming, and humorous answers, the staff agreed that the process made the yearbook staff experience one for the ages.

Senior Literary Editor Rachel Zaydak said, "Constructing the 2008-2009 yearbook simply wouldn't have been the same without the 'Without' theme."

Story by
Jordan
Talmadge, 12

Without woes...

In an attempt to accumulate more "without" answers to run down the right side of every spread, senior Maria Scheller fills out passes for students to come to the auditorium during club picture days. "I never thought I'd ever finish typing in those answers. If I had to type ipod, cell phone, or friends one more time, I would have boiled kittens," said Scheller. Overall, Scheller typed in 1270 answers.

Editor of the year

Someone once said, "Rules were made to be broken." For the first time concerning "Editor of the Year," I now break one of my own rules. I have never given "Editor of the Year" to an Editor-in-Chief, and yet I emphatically have chosen Mr. Jordan Talmadge as the 2009 Editor of the Year.

Serving yearbook staff for 3 years, Jordan has gathered personal quotes from over 1200 individuals, he has polled twice as many, and he has truly become a master at writing incredible captions. Still, I chose Jordan for various other reasons.

In my 15 years of advising yearbooks, I have never had a chief editor who truly took it upon himself to better the program. In a year where I had less time in the yearbook room to complete tasks, Mr. Talmadge did his best to motivate the other editors to finish all assignments well before the actual deadlines. Also, Jordan truly aimed to get as many students into the book as possible, not just his friends or students who belong to many clubs and organizations at the school.

For these reasons and countless others, congratulations and thank you, Jordan, for your kindness, character, and commitment.

Cover down...
Careful to cover down, senior Jesse Cribbs and other wind members keep their shoulders front during a fall marching band practice. "Marching band was always very interesting. Getting to perform in front of thousands was the highlight of my high school career," said Cribbs. She served as co-section leader of the clarinet section of the band.

Band of brothers...

After a Friday night home football game against the Woodland Hills Wolverines, seniors Jordan Talmadge, John Springer, and Ken Beck play Hungry Like the Wolf. On postgame festivities, Springer said, "With Jordan, Ken, and me working as a team it was hard not to be the center of attention at Chris's postgame bash." Of all the Rock Band instruments, Springer enjoyed playing the drums the most.

Back in black...

In the upper cafeteria during the SADD-sponsored Coffee House, sophomore Zach Leda and his band, Vicious Cycle, perform Welcome to the Jungle by Guns-n-Roses. Leda said, "We like to play 80's hair band songs like Motley Crue, Van Halen, and AC/DC." Sophomore Blayze Stefaniak sang vocals, sophomore Eric Saul played drums, sophomore Tom Lookabaugh played rhythm guitar, and 8th grader Tyler Lookabaugh played bass.

Rock It Out

Clubs offer various ways to incorporate music into life

Students often associated music at the high school with activities such as band, choir, and the instrumental and vocal jazz ensembles. Yet, music managed to make an appearance in other types of clubs as well as everyday classroom routines. Several non-traditional organizations incorporated song into their own activities.

In Gamers Club, members conquered virtual challenges by allowing songs to keep them focused on video game tasks.

"Background music in a game sets the mood for battles or sentimental parts of a game's storyline," said senior Alicia Meredith, an active participant in the club.

"When a character encounters enemies, the music switches to a more exciting beat than when the character is running around the setting."

Instrumental activities relied on music and song to carry out their message. But other portions of this organization used the instrumental music to inspire the work of their own activity. The winterguard team created dances that followed the beat of the band's tunes.

"Usually any kind of music works fine," said senior member of the guard Beka Aber. "Some groups do classical and some do pop rock, or even satanic. Anything that will please a crowd is good winterguard music."

Clubs and organizations made up only a few of the groups that demonstrated musical abilities. Ordinary classes, such as the various Spanish courses, often brought cultural songs into the lesson plans. With the annual Spanish field trip to a themed musical performance and the fall salsa dance in the atrium, it came as no surprise to find Spanish music incorporated in classroom lessons as well.

"We've done radio shows in Spanish, as well as listened to the latest pop hits from Spain to keep connected with the culture," said senior Emily Barker. "It's a nice change of pace from normal course work."

Sing, sing, sing...
With music at hand, junior Kathryn Summerville sings along with the River City Brass Band. "You have to really watch the conductor for cutoffs and dynamics," said Summerville. She recognized A Winters Night as her favorite piece to sing at the concert.

Looking back on the night of the Bands of America Grand National Prelims, I realized that it was the music itself that held everyone together. Ten or 20 years down the road, each of us will hear a song that will bring us back to that very night when we played our hearts out.

Personally, music has gotten me through three years of high school. We all joined music activities for one reason; we liked what music did for us and how it made us feel. After nats, we knew we were coming home champions no matter how we placed because we would always have that musical experience. It was the music that got us through the season, the same music that moved us all.

By the book...
Just after he won the previous point, Mr. Swanson serves the ball to his opponents in the NHS vs. Faculty Volleyball Game. On how his library books helped him in the battle, librarian Swanson said, "I read all of our library books dealing with how to dominate weak high school volleyball students. This helped with my crushing serves and masterful performance." Swanson further said, "I enjoyed showing the students how to win gracefully. We teachers always dominate and are good sports in the process."

Check mates...
To gain expertise for Chess Club, freshman Rich Lednak battles senior Ben Cramer. Concerning the complexity of the game, Cramer said, "Compared to other games, chess takes more brain power and strategy." Cramer has played chess since the young age of 12.

Battle it out...

Inside the back track field, junior Sarah Geffel wrestles senior Christine Zalewski for the ball in the Student Council sponsored Powder Puff Football Game. On the event, Geffel said, "Yeah. The juniors definitely creamed the seniors." Conversely, the seniors won the game on Halloween of 2008.

Battled and Bruised

Organizations wage war

When the bell rang to signal the beginning of activity period on certain days, warriors from two different regions came ready for battle, the veteran combatants from the faculty side, and the younger soldiers from the student side.

On November 26, 2008, the first student-teacher showdown of the year transpired. The studious National Honor Society took their rightful place on one side of the court as the restless teachers took their place on the alternative side of the volleyball net.

Senior Emily Barker said, "I continually dove for the ball punishing my knees in the process with bruises and brush burns. The bad thing was I had a beauty pageant that very weekend. My mom was furious to say the least." Barker further said, "I had to have not only a whole bottle of make-up for my face, but also one for my knees."

Pushing further into the year, Future Business Leaders of America (FBLA) faced off with the teachers in a friendly game of hockey. From the words of senior Jon California, "friendly" simply did not accurately express the battle.

California emphatically said, "Even before the opening face-off, the intensity level was at a maximum. Our first goal gave us the courage to not only win, but win big. It was as if a fire inside of us had been ignited."

Throughout the year, students began to fear certain teachers on the floor. Concerning hockey, California said, "Mr. Smith was tough; he had enormous athletic ability. I must admit that Mr. Berzonsky was pretty tricky too. They both stood out in my mind."

Still, junior Livy Ciotoli thought differently. "Mrs. Brine was always intense. You just don't want to be around her when she has hold of a hockey stick."

Slap shot...
As he looks upon the ball just off of senior Justin Retter's shoulder, freshman Randy Dengler eyes up the ball's descent. "I got the ball back, made a pass, received it back,
and then scored," said Dengler.
In the FBLA sponsored floor
hockey game, the students beat the faculty by a score of four to one.

Any Student vs. Faculty event was a showcase for teachers to absolutely humiliate vulnerable, defenseless, and incredibly pathetic students. Honestly, I have seen injured salmon put up a better fight with a grizzly bear than students put up with faculty. Personally, I pictured the entire student team as Joe Chiodo look-alikes who just kicked my precious cat
Fergus. Then it was ON!

With my sharp blows and jaguar-like reflexes, I brought it on like a freight train without brakes and a conscience. It felt good to feast on the self-esteem of the likes of NHS, FBLA, and Key Club members.

Basket case...
Playing Uncle Henry in The Wizard of Oz, senior Dane Farrell carefully places his own dog in Mrs. Gultch's basket. "I loved working with Kiersten Moyes because I felt she challenged me to be a better actor," said Farrell about acting in the musical. Senior Kiersten Moyes played the wicked witch and Mrs. Gultch in the show.

Ready, set, action...
At the auditions for the annual Key Club Talent Show, senior Joe Chiodo films the performances of all students who applied. "It was challenging filming the acts because the camera was really outdated," said Chiodo. Chiodo further said, "I was most impressed with the bands that performed."

No butts about it...
In Act I of the fall drama, "High School Non-Musical," Beckett Von Shakespeare, played by senior Jen Zatzko delivers her lines with a comedic prosthetic butt. "I love acting, especially when I can play a character that's not close to my personality by any means," said Zatzko. Throughout her high school years, Zatzko has participated in four dramas.

Clubs/Activities provide acting opportunities

"The weirdest character I've ever had to play is actually Sally Valley, the stupid cheerleader in The Bachelor King from the 2007 fall drama. Usually I seem to get weird, old, mean characters like the Wicked Witch," said senior Kiersten Moyes about the strangest character she has ever had to portray.

For many of the students, acting became an everyday way of life, through participation in performing clubs and activities such as Drama Club, the musical,

GMK, and Mock Trial.

"These are the best clubs, cause you get to be something you're not, and they attract the most interesting people," Moyes said.

When you go on camera, we have to be serious. Still, Mrs. Jacobs allows us to have fun with it," said junior Christine Arick about Good Morning Kiski.

Certainly, the majority of the students who participated in these activities experienced regular dramatic personality shifts onstage, but even those who worked behind the scenes had a part to play.

"It was awkward at time as the stage manager at musical cause I had to yell at people for messing around and talking. It was difficult to reprimand my friends," said senior Maria Scheller about her transformation from mild mannered student to universally feared stage manager for the dramatic productions at the school.

Carefully adjusting the Wasilchak, focuses on the

the antics behind the scenes,
Wasilchak said, "Trinity wants

Grrr." Wasilchak served as the station manager for Good Morning Kiski.

"Nobody knows how much attitude and acting talent it takes to become believable on the stand. As a witness in Mock Trial, you not only need to know your statement,
but you truly have to become your witness.

The way it's set up, you always know beforehand what questions will come to you from your own team members. The hard part concerns the cross-examinations that are conducted by the opposing council.

At the Pitt competition this year, the prosecuting attorney threw me loads of attitude and it was really hard not to dish it back. You honestly have to express your emotions to make the situation believable.
That's really where the acting skills become paramount."

Ready to scare the patrons, seniors Ashley Waner, Ellie Weyant, and Jessica Wawrzyniak paint books on the wall to simulate a study. Concerning the Community Outreach Program sponsored haunted house, Waner said, "I actually scared a girl so much that she started to cry. It was awesome." The volunteers spent the two weekends before Halloween frightening the local attendees.

Clubs find unique ways to raise money

Story by
Rachel Zaydak,
12

"A birthday party of a bunch of little girls came through and they all ended up flying against the walls and knocking over the props because I scared them so bad," said sophomore Ben Borst.

Shocking young girls may not come to mind first when someone mentions fundraising, but it served as Community Outreach Program's (COP) main source of income. The club hosted a haunted house at the Vandergrift Fire Hall to raise money for the community.

Senior and Secretary of the COP, Ethan

Kovalcik said, "There was a ton to do before we could open the haunted house; it had to be planned, built, and decorated first of all, then members of the club had to sign up in shifts to work it."

The exhausting process "paid off" in over $700 in profits raised for the club.

Much like the idea of hosting a haunted house, other creative fundraisers aimed to spark the interest of the students and community in order for other school organizations to raise money. SADD club hosted one such fundraiser called The Coffee House in December.

Students who bought tickets chilled in the cafeteria eating cookies and drinking coffee with friends as they listened to student bands.

Senior Courtney Polka said, "It was a really fun time; the performing bands had volunteers go up and sing a couple of songs. A few of the girls who went up were my friends and we got to watch and tease them afterwards about it."

Super sport...

At the Marching Band sponsored Cruise-In Car Show, senior Doug Kirkpatrick adjusts the air filter on a 1967 Super Sport Chevelle. "My dad got this car when he was 18 and when I got my permit, he said I could drive it around every now and then," said Kirkpatrick. The car show raised over $8800 at the event that featured over 500 cars.

C is for cookie...

Ready to distribute cookies at the SADD club sponsored Coffee House, senior Ryan Bargerstock heads out the door to hungry patrons. "There were a bunch of kids in the upper cafeteria who didn't have cookies. I had to run back and forth with them. I almost tripped over one of the cords and spilled cookies all over the place," said Bargerstock. Besides SADD, he belonged to Student Council, Red Ribbon, and NHS.

Telethon is a huge fundraiser Kiski does for the Salvation Army and St. Vincent DePaul. But how do you get people to come to donate in the freezing cold? You do it with entertainment.

During the 2008 telethon, there was a lot going on. Students participated in a ping-pong tournament with the winner, junior Evan Conroy, playing Mr. Swartzlander and taking the final prize.

There were also student bands performing, and there was a Kiski Idol competition. The ever popular class challenge and free hot dogs and hot chocolate also encouraged people to visit and donate.

What if it was silent? I mean if there were no familiar church bells ringing in town.

What would Christmas at K-Mart be like if there wasn't a person freezing her for the Salvation Army?

Without that young, working Boy Scout, would your neighborhood be so selfless?

Helping hands...

At the Vandergrift food bank, junior Tony Shaffer juggles with the task of balancing and unloading watermelons. "I enjoy helping the workers at the food bank because it is a very hard job, and they can always use a hand. Helping others in the community is a very rewarding experience as well," said Shaffer. Shaffer estimated that he moved about fifty watermelons on that particular day at the food bank.

It has not always been an easy road for you, but you are now at the end of one road ready to begin another. We are all so very proud of you and all that you have become and yet to become.

From the moment you started running instead of walking first, we knew you wouldn't let life's obstacles get in the way of what you want to become.

Always remember who has been here to help you along the way through life's journey so far, and we will always be there, night and day, whenever you need us. Remember we are always proud of you. Stay the same wonderful, compassionate, person always. You will accomplish your dreams and goals and we will always be there for you.

55 VJ's Pix of the year

A Personal Note from Mr. Fantaski,
Campus YB Adviser

Reflecting a long Campus tradition, the yearbook staff now offers, once again, its worst pictures of the year. The student body looks forward to this part of the yearbook yearly and has submitted all of the photographs that appear throughout the listing. The yearbook staff added quotes from the people in each picture to add even a bit more whimsy to the book.

Realize that in judging, some adjudicators have advised the Campus staff to eliminate this portion of the book because they deemed it inappropriate. However, based upon the students' requests and love of the tradition, we have included it again and will do so as long as the students demand it.

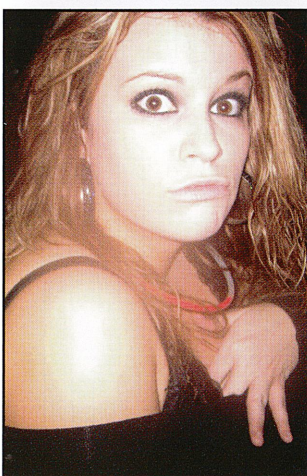

Enjoy these shots and we hope that our efforts have produced a book that each student will cherish for a lifetime.

Bethany...

We are so proud of all your accomplishments. You have excelled in academics, athletics and music. We have enjoyed watching you dance and sing since you were a little girl. You have been blessed with so many talents and abilities. Follow your dreams and keep up your hard work and determination. We know that you will succeed at whatever you do in life.

We love
you,

Dominique,
You've had us wrapped around your little finger since the day you were born. Now look at you, you're all grown up. You've made us so proud. The sky is the limit, so go on and chase your dreams. We'll always be here to support you. So, remember that the road can lead you home anytime you want it to.

Dominique Pugliese

Jordan,

Where did the time go? We are so very blessed to have you for a son and brother. From the day you were born, you were such a joy and have touched our very hearts. Watching you grow into the fine young man that you've become has made us very proud and we are honored that you have been a part of our lives.

The memories of watching you play hockey will always be treasured and unforgettable. From the little boy that wasn't sure he wanted to play, to the strong, confident player you became, each game you took to the ice were moments that will forever be captured in time. Hattricks, goals, assists, Captain of the Varsity Team, and PIHL All-Star. What a way to celebrate your Senior season!

You have accomplished many things by always setting your goals high and never giving up. Your attitude and determination to succeed will continue to bring you much success in life. Always reach for the stars and follow your dreams! Trust in God and remember how very much that you are loved.

Congratulations!

Love,
 Mom, Dad, & Jeremy

It has been 18 years since the FedEx envelope brought pictures of a baby boy in an orphanage far away. From that moment on, you were our son and our dream came true. You were the "energizer bunny boy," full of excitement, laughter, athletic ability, and love. Watching you on the soccer field, never hesitating to flip and fly through the air to get to the ball, has been a joy for us. Thank you! School has not been easy, but you have worked hard. It doesn't seem possible that it has been almost 18 years since someone in a Cambodian orphanage said, "Do you want her?" From that moment forward, you have been the most wonderful gift that we could ever have hoped to receive. You are used to people saying, "Oh, you were so lucky to have been adopted." But what they don't realize is that WE are the lucky ones to have you as our daughter. You have filled our lives with lots of love, joy, pride, and shoes!! Dream big dreams, always try to make the world a better place, work hard, believe in yourself, and enjoy the adventures ahead of you! We love you!

Every moment and memory has been a stepping stone on the path leading to whom and where you are today. Look at where you have been from the moment you were born... matchbox cars, morning hugs and kisses before school, and moments you didn't realize we were watching.

There were bumps along the road too... homework, BMX injuries, balancing school, friends, and a job.

Now it's quick goodbyes rushing out the door, driving a car, and being amazed at your creativity as you discover what you truly desire for your future. We're proud of the young man you've become, your dedication and commitment to the Marching Band, and each accomplishment.

Remember to always "Dress for Success", keep music in your life, and never lose faith in God. He'll remain faithful to you as you choose the next path of your lifetime... your future!

You deserve the best!

The mischievous twinkle in your eye as a toddler has become a sparkle in your eyes as a young lady. That sparkle reflects the inner beauty that is now so much a part of you. We are so proud of the person you've become and wish you the very best as you graduate and make your way through life. We will always be there for you.

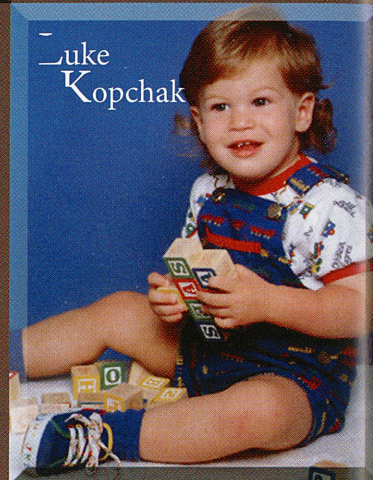

*All our love,
Mom & Dad*

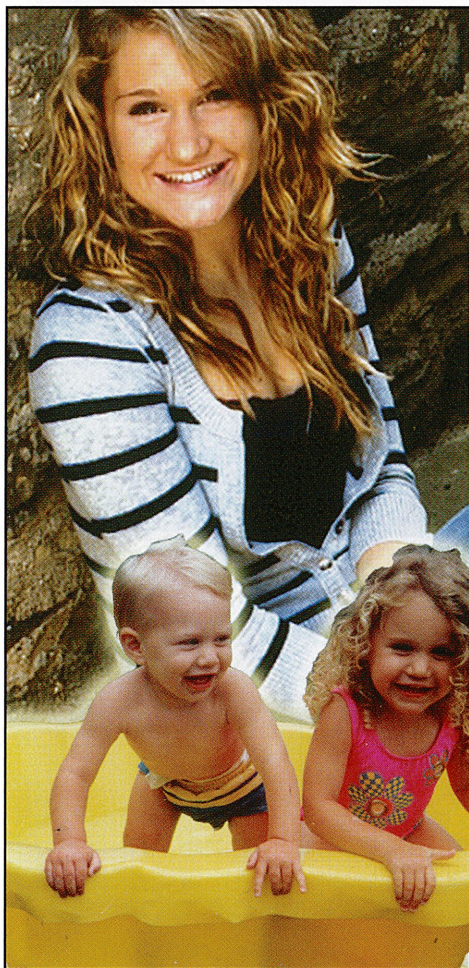

Wow! It feels like only yesterday you came into our lives and our hearts. You are about to begin a new and exciting journey, as we did 17 years ago. We have loved every minute of watching you grow from a curly-haired boy to a wonderful, young man. The early days of sticky fingers, dirty faces, and you taking charge, still make us laugh. Then came baseball, soccer, quad-racing, and finally, your heart's passion, hockey. Ah, the road trips: Michigan, Chicago, Canada, Arizona. Where haven't you played hockey? Each trip became more exciting, more challenging, and more fun than the last.

Your laughter, warmth, and charm have touched the hearts of all that know you. You have such a special way, a special smile that lights up a room from the moment you enter. No words can express our gratitude for the priceless memories you have given us over the years. Also, no words can describe the pride and love we have for you in our hearts. You are special; reach for the stars, believe in yourself as we believe in you, and you can have it all.

Susan,

From our little princess on her pedestal through your sweet childhood, you've brought nothing but joy to us.

Your fierce sense of independence and rather strong opinions have made the going very interesting at times. We admire so much your talents, appetite for learning, compassion, and drive. You've worked very hard, your achievements are your own, and you can be as proud as we are of the fine young lady you've become.

Steve*

Stephanie Taree

Adam,

Where has the time gone? It seems like just yesterday you were laughing like Woody Woodpecker. Your laughter was and still is sooo contagious. We are very proud of you and your accomplishments!

Wherever life takes you, we know you will succeed. Just remember to keep living, loving, laughing, and dreaming.

*Congratulations,
Bubba!*

*Love,
Mom, Dad & Amy*

Adam
Reifschneider

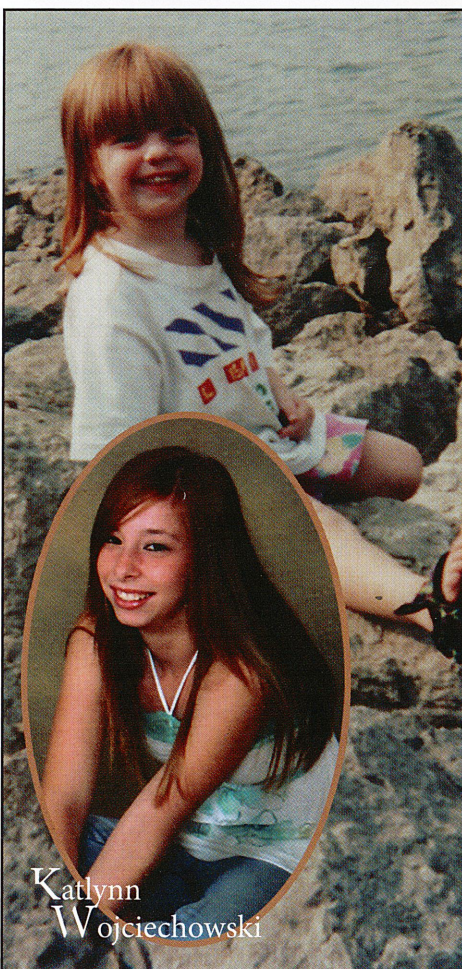

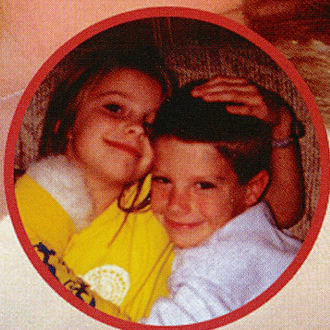

Lindsey,

All the things that make you who you are... your drive, intensity, focus, and laugh make us proud of you each and every day.

As you continue down the path of scholar-athlete, remember we are always with you!

*Love,
Mom, Dad,
and Bobby*

Kate,

A daughter is the happy memories of the past...

the joyful memories of the present...

and the hope and promise of the future.

Love,

Mom & Dad

Boo girl, (Kellie Ann)

You knew then
what you wanted.

You know now
what you wanted.

Continue to grow
as you meet all challenges ahead.

I stand proudly
behind you.

Always!

Love,
Momma

Kellie
Starkey

Carly,

Congratulations
on all of your accomplishments.
We're very proud of
you. May your future
be filled with happiness and success.

Love,
Mom, Dad, Lisa, and Chrissy

Carly
Dibas

LAF,

"Live with intention. Play with abandon.
Continue
to learn.
Appreciate your friends."
Remember that time and distance cannot diminish true friendship.

With much
love,
Mom Nies

etter from the Editor

Jordan Talmadge, 12

It seems like just yesterday that I was an inexperienced, intimidated freshman applying for a spot on the Campus yearbook staff. Here I am now, three award-winning yearbooks later, concluding my membership in the fraternity of the yearbook staff. This fraternity is unlike any other in-school activity. We see our sponsor, our adviser, as a friend. We take pride in our work. But on top of it all, this year's fraternity holds within it a closeness among the members that is truly an experience in itself. Our final product would not have been the same without any of our editors, as contributors, but more so as individuals.

As a three year editor of the reporting staff, it seems only fitting that I begin with them. Dessie, Sarah, and Kate, as first year editors you have been given endless instructions from me and Mr. Fantaski, all of which you responded positively. Your patience and attention to detail will serve you well in life beyond the Campus yearbook.

Livi and Fawn, you had giant shoes to fill at the beginning of the year, but with the senior guidance from Jen and Jaimi, you have filled those shoes to their breaking point. Jen and Jaimi, your work ethic and pleasant attitudes have served staff far beyond what mere pictures can express.

And Lit. Staff, oh Lit. Staff. Susan and Kiersten, you have filled the yearbook room with more cat fights, inside jokes, and punishing puns than I thought could fit within its walls. More importantly though, with the addition of two free thinkers in Rachel and Ben, the staff has provided the yearbook with outside-the-box stories that make even the illiterate want to read.

To the most overlooked staff of all... Business staff. Brynn, the mother of the yearbook room, your cheerful disposition, work efficiency, and delicious treats have boosted the moral of everyone since day one. Anna, your quiet personality contrasted your work; you were swift like a true stallion. Christine, your laid back attitude and willingness to help will be crucial to next year's book, as it was for this year's.

Maria, your "without" duties which began before the Student Life section and lasted even after the parent ads helped emphasize our theme to a great magnitude. And Daviña, you proved your dedication early as one of the founding fathers of our theme with the trip to Waynesburg.

Clearly, we wouldn't be where we are today without you, Mr. Fantaski. I cannot begin to imagine the thousands of hours that you have dedicated to us, whether it was as a yearbook adviser, mentor, or friend. Throughout the year you made it clear that you would do basically anything for us kids, and I feel comfortable speaking for the entire staff when I say that the feeling is mutual. Your yearbook knowledge rivals only your willingness to help, which you have proven to us through math tutoring, proof reading, letters of recommendation, and the list goes on. So here's to you, Mr. F. Thanks for everything.

To the 2008-2009 staff as a whole: It was a great experience, and I can comfortably say, it wouldn't have been the same without any of you.

Senior Specific Issues

Senior Portraits

All seniors must have their yearbook portrait taken by the official senior photographer. Gary Gibson from Studio G shot nearly all of the senior portraits for this publication.

In the spring of their junior year, the yearbook staff and the senior photographer conduct an assembly with all prospective seniors to distribute all pertinent information concerning senior pictures. The senior photographer offers various times for individual appointments, as well as a wide variety of packages from which to choose. While we certainly encourage it, students do not have to purchase pictures or packages from the senior photographer. However, each student must pay a sitting fee for the processing and developing of the pictures. This year, Studio G charged $12. This price may increase from year to year due to rising costs involved.

The yearbook staff can guarantee that individual senior pictures will appear in the book only if each student schedules his/her appointment on time, arrives for the shoot on time, and chooses which proof to appear in the book on time. No profile shots will appear in the yearbook. Additionally, the yearbook staff and the senior photographer will define all due dates, and will include these in the information given out at the senior portrait assembly.

By having portraits taken by the same photographer under the same conditions, the yearbook staff can implement uniform quality for all photographs, thereby serving the best interest of all students.

For the 2009-2010 school year, the district will utilize the talents of Ms. Paige Duckworth for all senior portraits. Her establishment, Hourglass Photo, resides at 2 Labelle-Vue Road - Vandergrift, PA - 15690. Telephone: 724-568-3128.

Senior Specials

While considered inappropriate in most yearbook judging forums, the Campus staff feels that the Senior Specials represent a Cavalier tradition worth keeping. Sometime after the winter holiday break, the yearbook staff designates one week for all seniors to vote upon their favorites in a wide variety of categories. The staff collectively decides on which categories to include and which to eliminate. Still, the staff tries only to include categories that reflect positively upon the students.

Only the yearbook adviser counts the ballots for each and every category; yearbook staff members play no role in the election. To maximize the opportunity for each student to receive a Senior Special, no senior may win two categories, with the exception of the "Best Friends" and "Class Couple" categories. Should one student win two or more categories, the yearbook adviser governs the final decision on how to award each category.

Senior Directory

Determined by deadlines, the yearbook staff designates a single week, usually in January or February, for seniors to complete a directory sheet that asks for all of the clubs, sports, music ensembles, academic curriculum, and future plans for each senior. The yearbook staff includes only directory information submitted by the designated deadline and reserves the right to expunge any entries that include falsified information.

Senior Parent Ads

On the first day of school, each senior receives a form that defines everything that parents need to know about Parent Ads. The form defines pricing, requirements for the ad, and relative deadlines.

Later in the year, the yearbook staff will remind parents with another copy of the Parent Ad flyer.

The yearbook staff does its best to personalize each ad, and this takes a considerable amount of time. Furthermore, each year, the staff has only a limited amount of space for Parent Ads. Hence, to guarantee that individual ads will appear in the book, the staff suggests that parents submit them as soon as possible. The Campus staff reserves the right to deny Parent Ads once the designated amount of space has depleted.

Recognition and Awards

CSPA - Score: (935)

Gold Medalist with All-Columbian Honors in Concept, Coverage, and Writing.

NSPA - Score: (4435)

All-American Honors Rating with Marks of Distinction in Concept/Essentials, Coverage, Design, and Photography.

PSPA - (Keystone)

Taylor Publishing

Featured as one of nation's best in Theme and Design in their Yearbook YB; company ran extra copies as samples across the nation.

Client Satisfaction and Pricing

Client Satisfaction

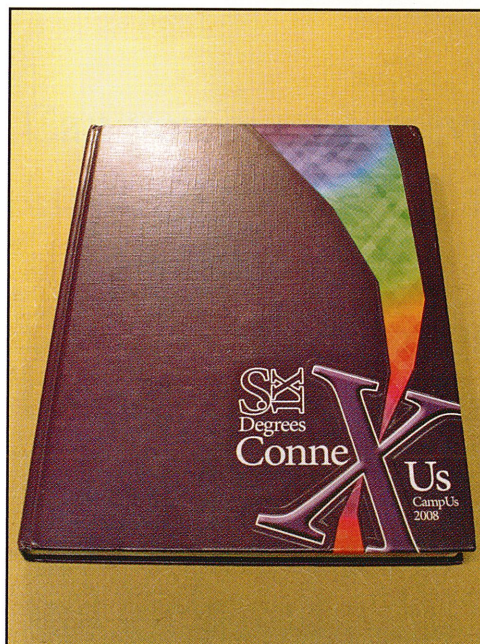

By virtue of the fact that yearbook represents a student conceived, planned, and produced publication, the staff cannot guarantee complete satisfaction to the purchaser. Hence, the staff will refund no money for poor portrait quality, misspelled names, etc. Books returned for refunds must not have any writing in them, and cannot display any damage obviously done by the student. Once returned, the book becomes the property of the staff and may become resold at the current cost.

The yearbook staff will exchange books only for certain reasons. No exchanges will transpire unless the adviser determines that the book has a major flaw such as missing pages or pages printed upside-down. All refunds and exchanges happen only at the discretion of the adviser.

Should the yearbook staff have no record of a student ordering a book, the student must produce a receipt or a cancelled check to demonstrate proof of the purchase. No student may pick up a book for another student.

Pricing

Students order books during Campus Week, the first full week after Labor Day. Each student must fill out a yearbook ordering form, place it in an envelope with the appropriate payment, and drop it in the wooden collection box outside room 106.

2007-2008 Campus Yearbook

The yearbook staff accepts 950-1000 orders and then starts a waiting list. Students on the waiting list pay $10 more and do not pay for their books until distribution day. Additionally, any student who signs the waiting list or waiting list form must pay for his/her book at the end of the year or the staff reserves the right to hold report cards/diplomas; every unpaid book/balance represents a student debt.

Students may pay half during Campus Week and half after the December holiday break if they wish. Still, if the student misses the announced deadline for second payments, a late fee will occur.

Fatality Courtesies

Should any student and/or school personnel die anytime during the current coverage period, the staff will treat the death in a professional manner.

The staff does not create dedication pages. However, the staff welcomes students and/or parents to purchase a Parent Ad in the back of the book. Additionally, provided that an extra book exists at the end of the year, the staff will donate the book to the family survivors.

Let's face it though, none of this

The 2008-2009 Campus yearbook represented the 47th for Kiski Area High School - 200 Poplar Street - Vandergrift, PA 15690 - Telephone: 724-845-8181. The staff ordered 1175 copies from Taylor Publishing Company - 1550 W. Mockingbird Lane - Dallas, TX 75235. Cari Frei represented the book locally and Cathy Simoneaux served as the Account Executive. The total staff consisted of 17 editors and five other staff members.

School/Printer Information

This book employed a Smyth type binding with 100# enamel paper for all 280 pages inside. The yearbook staff utilized Adobe InDesign CS3 and Adobe Photoshop CS3 to create the publication on one computer. The staff used two fonts throughout the book: Minion Pro and a font they created called "Without." Taylor printed the lithocote cover with a matte finish. Additional treatments included varnishing, embossing, and Florentine graining. The company printed the endsheets using a 4-color process.

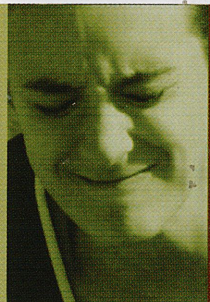

Book Specifics

Gary Gibson - Studio G - 202 Longfellow Street - Vandergrift, PA 15690 - Telephone: 724-567-1500 - provided most of the senior portraits, and the fall sports team pictures. Paige Duckworth - Hourglass Studio - 2 Labelle Vue Rd. - Vandergrift, PA 15690 - Telephone: 724-568-3128 - provided the underclass panel pictures, the club pictures, the winter sports team pictures, the spring sports team pictures, and the marching band group picture. The photography editors shot all candid pictures using two Canon Rebel cameras.

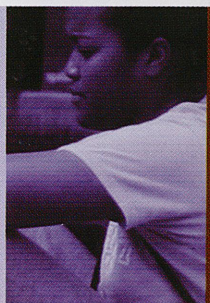

Photography

The Kiski Area High School Yearbook Staff belonged to several professional organizations that included NSPA, PSPA, and CSPA. The 2008 Campus book received a Gold rating from CSPA, an All-American rating from NSPA, and also appeared in the featured Theme and Design section of Taylor's elite compilation book, The Yearbook Yearbook. Taylor Publishing also selected the yearbook as a company sample.
